FALL, DOHENY PLEAD NOT GUILTY

DEFENDANTS IN OIL SCANDAL CASES ARE ALLOWED TO PLEAD

Waive Reading Of Indictments — Lawyers Flank Pair

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Arraigned before a court after nearly five years of contentious litigation, Albert B. Fall former secretary of the interior, and Edward L. Doheny, multimillionaire oil magnate, entered formal pleas of not guilty today to indictments charging them with conspiracy to defraud the government in the leasing of naval oil reserves in California.

The central figures in the "oil scandal" were arraigned in district supreme court on the first of four indictments growing out of the leasing of the naval oil reserves by Fall to Doheny after Harry F. Sinclair. Today's pleadings concerned only Fall and Doheny and the Elk Hills reserve in California.

The arraignments were quickly concluded. Attorneys for the defendants waived the reading of the lengthy indictment and both Fall and Doheny replied in loud, firm tones when their names were called:

"Not guilty."

They sat side by side in the court room, flanked and surrounded by an imposing array of counsel.

WIFE KILLER FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER; JURY DENIES MERCY

Conviction Carries Death Penalty For Batavia Farmer

BATAVIA, O., Nov. 10.—"Guilty of first degree murder without recommendation of mercy," was the verdict hanging over the head of Scott Workman, New Richmond farm tenant, today following the report of the jury late yesterday, shortly after the conclusion of his trial for murdering his wife, Nora, last August.

Workman had admitted he fired three shots in his wife's body while she was nursing an eight-month-old baby at her breast; he pleaded for mercy, however, on the grounds that he was insanely intoxicated at the time.

It was the first verdict of first degree murder without a mercy recommendation in Clermont Co. for thirty-six years.

A motion for a new trial will be heard Saturday, at which time the court will pass sentence.

CANTONESE TROOPS PREPARING ATTACK

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10.—Cantonese troops are massing in the vicinity of Kiangsi, preparatory to launching an attack from five directions on the city of Nanking, according to word received here today.

Recovering from wounds, General Chian Kai Shek, leader of the Cantonese, today at Kiangsi predicted that his armies would be in possession of their objective before December.

The Cantonese general declared that all troops of General Sun Chuang Fang had been driven from the province of Kiangsi and that the Anhwei armies were in disordered flight.

ONE DEAD, WOMAN MISSING AFTER FIRE

Three-Story Building Destroyed By Fire—Twenty-Five Tenants Flee Flames In Scanty Attire

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 10.—One man was fatally injured, a woman was reported missing and a three-story building was destroyed by fire here early today.

Robert Freed, 35, tenant on the third floor of the old Newmeyer opera house here, was overcome by smoke and died an hour after being removed from the blazing building by firemen.

A Miss Guiler, who recently rented an apartment in the building, was missing following a check-up of the list of twenty-five tenants, all of whom fled scantily clad when flames menaced their apartments.

PEACE BANQUET FAILS TO QUIET STRIFE ON QUEEN'S SPECIAL

Special Car Provided For Dancer For Her To Leave Train—Professor Petresco Takes Charge Of Press Announcements

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN (IN COLORADO), Nov. 10.—Despite an attempted "peace banquet," the internal strife aboard the Rumanian special continued today as the royal party arrived in Denver.

Strained relations, bordering on an open rupture, existed between the royal entourage and the officials in charge of the train, following the imposing of a virtual censorship over news emanating from her majesty by Professor Nicolas Petresco, representing Premier Athanaseo of Rumania.

A special car today was at the disposal of Lole Fuller, danseuse friend of Queen Marie and indirect focus of the new storm center. This car, furnished by Colonel John H. Carroll, official host to her majesty, was ready to take Mme. Fuller to New York or any other place she desired. In addition, Colonel Carroll announced that May Birkhead, press agent for Mme. Fuller, would leave the train at Denver. Miss Birkhead, charged with intrigue by Carroll, was reported improved in health since her recent nervous collapse.

STATE WANTS HALL-MILLS JURY TO VIEW MURDER LOCATION

Simpson Continues To Spring Surprises In Death Trial

COURT HOUSE, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 10.—George E. Totten, former county detective of Somerset County was the first witness called today when the seventh day of the Hall-Mills murder trial opened.

Before Totten got a chance to testify, Prosecutor Alexander Simpson asked the court if the jury would be allowed to visit the scene of the double murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills four years ago.

Judge Charles W. Parker said he would let the jurors confer on this matter at the noon recess.

Simpson, who is prosecuting the state's case in his inimitable way, has provided one thrill after another, and the end is not yet.

He almost confounded the defense by the unorthodox, helter-skelter way in which he presented the case. Then he wanted the court adjourned to a hospital, so the testimony of his star witness, Mrs. Jane Gibson, who became very ill, could be obtained. He put "surprise witnesses" on the stand who had never been heard of in the case. He "kidnaped" Mrs. Gibson from Somerville and put her in his own hospital in Jersey City.

And, finally last, yesterday, he capped the climax by suddenly producing from a brown cardboard box a grisly exhibit in the form of a plaster head and bust of a human figure, which he placed on the witness stand so Dr. Otto H. Schulze autopsy expert could illustrate for the jury just how the beautiful young choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, was shot to death and her tongue, larynx, windpipe and throat muscles—all the organs used in singing—cut from her throat.

VIOLETS IN NOVEMBER

OTTAWA, O., Nov. 10.—Chill November! With the temperature standing at thirty-three degrees, one above freezing, did not prevent Misses Marie Utendorf and Lucille Reese from wearing violet corsages, grown along Ottawa's edges this past week. The blooms were picked by two school children, who presented them to their "school mams." They were reported as being a healthy growth, with exceptionally long stems.

In the contact of the newspaper correspondents aboard with the queen, Major Stanley Washburn, aide to her majesty, has previously acted as liaison officer. Professor Petresco's announcement, that hereafter he would control the press interviews and would be the one to give forth official information, bid fair to lead to another conflict even more bitter than when Sam Hill, eccentric millionaire of Washington, was expelled from the train.

Mme. Fuller is Hill's friend and she indignantly protested his elimination.

Professor Petresco at first announced that her majesty was annoyed with the controversy caused by the presence of Mme. Fuller and would not be sorry to see her leave in Chicago.

Colonel Carroll, learning of the statement of Petresco, immediately declared Mme. Fuller was his guest and would be ordered off by one of his men.

Today the positions of Petresco and Carroll were reversed, with the professor declaring that her majesty wanted Mme. Fuller to remain and by Colonel Carroll producing his special car with the door open.

The "peace banquet" attended by members of the various factions on board, turned into more or less of an exchange of platitudes.

Colonel Carroll announced that the railroad was "paying the way" of the royal party and hoped everybody was enjoying it.

"Nobody else is paying a cent," declared the colonel.

M. Lovett, of her majesty's staff, declared that "nobody took the report of the press concerning the trip too seriously."

One of the newspaper correspondents was called on and he declared that he and his conferees had "leaned over backward in reporting the situation, in order to protect her majesty."

Ira Nelson Morrison, Rumanian consul-general in Chicago, made a plea for everyone to forget their differences and work in harmony for the welfare of a wonderful queen.

FLURRIES OF SNOW SEEN IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 10.—Flurries of snow and temperatures ranging a few degrees below freezing accompanied the first severe manifestation of winter here today.

The snow was of sleet-like consistency, which accompanied by a gale, caused pedestrians considerable discomfort.

Lake Erie was whipped by a 60-mile wind, which caused great waves to mount the breakwater on the lake front here and endanger shipping.

Sporadic snowstorms were reported in other Northern Ohio cities. The weather prediction was for colder weather tonight.

INVESTIGATE WINE FOUND DURING RAID

Authorities are examining for alcoholic content seven gallons of wine confiscated when officers intervened while a party was in progress at the home of Mrs. Belle Smith, colored, at Cedarville Saturday night. No arrests have been made.

The raiding party was composed of Deputy Sheriffs John Baughn and George Spencer, Motorcycle Policemen Peter Shagin and Marshall Hayes McLean, Cedarville.

AUTHORITIES SEEK STATE PEN CONVICT FOLLOWING ESCAPE

Donahey Exonerates Warden Of Blame—May Punish Guard

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—Authorities today continued their search for Oliver Glaspy, Athens County convict, the only one of the thirteen prisoners who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary Monday afternoon, still at large.

Governor Vic Donahey today had exonerated Warden Thomas of all blame in connection with the escape of these prisoners. The governor agreed with the warden that full responsibility for the break rested upon the shoulders of Guard Captain George Bennett.

Bennett, who was in charge of the inner gates when the prisoners escaped, violated a standing rule by opening both gates at the same time, the governor and warden agreed.

"Bennett will have to be disciplined," said Donahey.

"The morale of the entire organization depends on it. Warden Thomas did his full duty Monday. He has not done a thing to be censured for."

Unless infection develops, all injured prison employees, guards and prisoners will recover, it was announced.

Warden Thomas voiced the desire that the Ohio legislature this winter enact legislation providing that prisoners serving life for murder shall be electrocuted, by later order of court, if they attempt to escape from prison. The warden also favored imposition of life sentences upon prisoners serving short terms who participate with life-termers in an attempt to escape.

SENATE MEETS AS IMPEACHMENT COURT TO TRY FEDERAL JUDGE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—For the tenth time in American history the senate met today as a court of impeachment to try former Federal Judge George W. English, of Illinois, on charges of crimes and misdemeanors in office—but without a prisoner at the bar.

As Judge English resigned from the federal bench a week ago, administration leaders agreed to adjourn the court until December 13, to allow the house time in which to recommend dismissal of the charges.

This procedure would follow a precedent established in 1799, when impeachment charges

SOLEMN CATHEDRAL RITES UNITE ROYAL COUPLE IN BELGIUM

Prince Leopold And Princess Astrid Are Re-Married

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—As the bells of the cathedral of Sainte Gudule rang out and guns boomed, Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium was today married to Princess Astrid of Sweden, in a solemn ceremony in the cathedral, the religious confirmation of the civil ceremony held last week in Stockholm.

Belgium was gay in its rejoicing over its new princess and no such demonstrations have been seen since that November day eight years ago, almost to the day, when the World war came to an end.

An artillery salute of twenty-one guns resounded before the royal palace at 10:45, notifying the great throngs that the wedding procession had started.

Two squadrons of guards, with colors flying, acted as an escort for the wedding party.

ROYALTY ATTENDS

Close behind their carriage came the royal coach, bearing King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and Crown Prince Leopold. In a third state carriage rode Prince Charles and Princess Ingeborg, parents of the bride, and Princess Astrid, the cynosure of all eyes and the object of much adulation.

The wedding party, after its ride through throngs of demonstrative admirers, drew up before the cathedral of Sainte Gudule and on every one of the thirty stone steps leading to the cathedral door were two lieutenants from the 78th regiment, to which the young prince belongs, with swords drawn, forming an arch of glittering steel beneath which the wedding party ascended to the cathedral to receive the religious benediction.

Monsignor van Rye, successor to Cardinal Mercier as primate of Belgium, greeting the party at the cathedral door, even though he had originally declined to participate in the ceremony, opposing the union because of the differences in religions. It is stated that it was on the advice of the pope that he decided to officiate.

SERVICE IS BRIEF

The wedding party proceeded up the cathedral aisle and took their places before Monsignor van Rye, near the lectern outside of the altar, because the bride is not a Catholic.

Monsignor van Rye blessed the rings and performed the brief ceremony, the entire service lasting but a quarter of an hour. It was a merry party, including both royal families, that sat down to a luncheon at the palace that was the work of the highest art of Belgian chefs.

The gala day was concluded with a great reception given by the king and the queen at three this afternoon.

The prince and princess will leave for their honeymoon tomorrow. Upon their return, they will live in Bellevue palace, which comprises the left wing of the royal palace and which was formerly the home of Princess Clementine, daughter of Leopold II and now the widow of Prince Napoleon.

AGED MINER LOST; CREWS PROBE SHAFT

CAMBRIDGE, O., Nov. 10.—Completely baffled after a search of every foot of the several miles of entries in the Cleveland mine of the Cambria Colliery Coal Co., here, relief crews of searchers, headed by State Mine Inspector James Forgie, re-entered the mine today determined to find Pete Secoska, 70-year-old miner, who has been lost in the workings since early Monday morning.

Secoska's cap, safety lamp and dinner pail were found near the shaft late yesterday.

PRESIDENT TRAVELING WEST TO DEDICATE LIBERTY MEMORIAL

Plans Address In Kansas City, Mo., and Visit To Kansas City, Kan.—Special Routed Over Pennsylvania Panhandle Division

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—The train bearing the President and Mrs. Coolidge to Kansas City, arrived in Pittsburgh at 8:39 a. m., from Washington and departed at 8:48 a. m., over the Pennsylvania division of the Pennsylvania railroad.

For the second time in history, a president will visit Kansas City, Kansas.

President Coolidge, enroute to Kansas City, Missouri, to dedicate the $2,000,000 Liberty memorial erected by the residents of that city to the veterans of the world war, has agreed, following the ceremonies there, to cross the Kansas river and visit the other Kansas City, located in the state after which it is named.

It will mark the first time the present executive has even touched the state of Kansas since assuming the presidency.

The presidential party faces a full night and day on board train before reaching its destination. Apparently, those on board the train are about to experience their first touch of winter, for weather reports have told of snow and extreme cold in Kansas, veering rapidly east. All members of the party had been so warned shortly before starting from the damp, murky warmth of Washington.

The president faces an exceedingly busy seven hours tomorrow in Kansas City, Mo. Arriving shortly after breakfast, he will motor to the Muhleback hotel for a short rest. Then comes the dedicatory exercises at the war memorial. Following is a huge luncheon and then the visit to the sister city across the river. At 3:30 in the afternoon he departs for the capital.

In addition to Mrs. Coolidge, the president is accompanied by Secretary of War Davis, Secretary Everett Sanders, Col. S. A. Cheney and Capt. Wilson Brown, military and naval aides and Major J. F. Coupal, official physician.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO FRAUD CHARGES

P. W. Edmiston, South Charleston, was held to the grand jury under a total of $1,000 bond when he pleaded not guilty to two counts of obtaining money under false pretenses before R. O. Copsey, justice of the peace, Tuesday afternoon. In default of $500 bond on each charge he was remanded to the County Jail. Edmiston passed up the privilege of a hearing and was bound over to the grand jury.

He was arrested November 3 by Deputy Sheriff John Baughn for alleged embezzlement of $466.95 from the American Loan and Realty Co.

He is charged with mortgaging cattle that he did not possess while living in Ross Twp. His arrest was the result of information furnished by Mose Cramer, Xenia head of the company, when Edmiston returned in an effort to swing another loan.

WOMAN SWALLOWS POISON IN STORE

AKRON, O., Nov. 10.—Mrs. J. E. Robinson, 22, died in a hospital here today from the effects of polonium which she swallowed in a drug store last night while several clerks watched her.

Police declare the woman committed suicide during a spell of despondency caused by a misunderstanding with her family.

STUDENTS TRAPPED IN WRECKED SCHOOL ARE AMONG VICTIMS

More May Die—Frame Building Crushed By Twister

LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 10.—With a death list of seventeen, which probably will be increased to twenty by nightfall, stunned residents of Charles County began today to reconstruct some order out of the chaos that swept down from the skies late yesterday in the form of a savage, twisting tornado.

It left in its wake a narrow strip about twelve miles long and scarcely five hundred yards wide through this placid Maryland countryside and made of it a shambles which held the bodies of fourteen school children, three adults and more than forty injured.

Houses were flattened, trees uprooted, vehicles scattered, but the twister reserved most of its fury for the little frame school house that stood atop a knoll on the edge of the village. There it struck with demonic fury, lifted the two-room structure from its foundation and hurled it 150 feet away, a mass of broken timbers in a grove of trees.

There were fifty-five children at their desks in the school house when the twister struck. Fourteen of them are dead today and a dozen others are hurt so seriously that some deaths are considered certain.

The dead:

Jackie Clark, 12; Harry Claggett, 8; Charles Edwards, Jr.; James L. Martin, 6; Mary Ellen Bowie, 7; Edward Bean, 10; Chester Gamble; Lucille Miles, 12; Mary Alice Cooksey, 12; Lillian Della; John Teaser, 10; Lester Sinclair, 7; Lucille Edwards, 10; Louis Swann, 11; Rufus Watts, negro, and child; Lulu Patterson, negro.

ONE BOY ESCAPES

There was but one pupil in the school who escaped entirely unscathed in the destruction of the building—little "Johnny" Burr, 11. He had a desk near a window. When the building began to shake and there was the first rumble or cracking timbers, Johnny jumped out of the window and ran for help.

Before he was a hundred yards away, he looked backward and

ANTI-FASCIST PARTIES HALTED

ROME, Nov. 10.—The Italian police during the night occupied the offices of all anti-fascist parties and associations, declaring these organizations automatically dissolved by new police regulations, according to Messagero.

This is the first step taken in accordance with the drastic new regulations voted yesterday by the chamber of deputies.

JAPANESE STEAMER REPORTED MISSING

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Japanese steamer Shinzan Maru is reported missing and vessels sent in search of her have reported they have been unable to find any traces of her, according to a Yokohama dispatch received here.

Lloyd's register does not record a Shinzan Maru but the Shinzu Maru, of Yokohama, is listed as a vessel of 2,810 tons.

TYPO UNION WILL WELCOME MARIE

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—Queen Marie of Rumania will be welcomed here by the International Typographical Union despite the action of the Chicago Federation of Labor in condemning the manner in which the royal visitor was greeted by Americans, J. H. Taylor, secretary-treasurer announced.

The union has invited the queen to visit Typographical Terrace, official headquarters here, and the invitation will not be withdrawn, it was said.

RUSSIAN BARITONE DIES IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Joseph Schwarz, internationally-known Russian baritone, who joined the Chicago opera company, died here today. Death was due to kidney trouble, from which the singer had suffered for months.

In February, 1922, while in Chicago with the opera there, Schwarz married Mrs. Siskin, widow of the wealthy coffee merchant, from whom she inherited a fortune of $7,000,000.

AUTHORESS WHO SE DAUGHTER TURNED "BANDIT" TELLS WHY

Vashti Dale, in Concluding Installment, Says She Has New View of Motherhood—Need For Thought Among Parents

While Vashti Dale (Mrs. Charles Nichols) of Rock Island, Ill., was writing advice for other mothers on how to raise their children, her own daughter, over night, became the famous bobbed-haired "bandit" of Rock Island. Of course Beulah isn't a bandit.

Her daughter, Beulah, 16, made bold by hooch, broke into a residence, entered the bedroom of a 75-year-old man, stripped off her clothing, dressed herself in male attire, and started out to see the world—as a man. She was arrested in another city, brought back and paroled to her mother.

Now Vashti Dale, who for many years has been a contributor to magazines and newspapers, has another view of motherhood.

This is the third installment of her story, written for EFS and The Daily Gazette.

By VASHTI DALE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926
In this article I propose to talk plainly and straight to the point, because in it will be embodied the knowledge I have gleaned from my own stupendous awakening.

And I want, more than words can express, to pass this knowledge and this awakening on to other mothers who may, in consequence, be able to avoid the heartache and sorrow that have come to us.

I want to tell you how intolerance, in the shape of "old fashioned standards" was a directly responsible for Beulah's sensational experiment (for experiment it was) and in the telling I am sure that you will be able to grasp the reason which has made these talks essential to my peace of mind.

Just how and why did the intolerance in our home cause Beulah to do what she did?

Daughter Adores Dancing.
Beulah adores dancing. What normal, healthy young person does not?

And we should have made it possible for her to satisfy this normal desire in a normal, healthy way. We should have given parties for her at our home; and we should have allowed her to give parties to her young friends. Thus we would have assured ourselves that her associates were all that we desired them to be, and we would have known that hooch drinking, petting parties and joy-riding were neither thought of nor desired.

Beulah also likes the fun and work that calls for plenty of mental and physical action; and we should have made special efforts to give her this kind of fun and work. By so doing we could have turned her surplus energies into constructive channels.

Cause Goes Deep.
In short, we should have known that our standards were too old fashioned to fit her, and we should have modified them accordingly.

"But," you demur, "do you mean to tell me that these mistakes you made in bringing up your daughter are representative of the mistakes made by the average parent today?"

"Do you mean to say that these mistakes are representative of the great menace of intolerance which you have made such a point of in these talks?"

No—I do not mean this. The intolerance I mean goes deeper. It is the kind that refuses to see that dancing, flapperism and sheikism and even drinking and the greater social evils are merely the result of the urge of youth which may be turned into constructive character building or into destructive evil.

It is the kind of intolerance that refuses to see the spirit because of the letter that stands in the way, the kind that lives, moves and has its being in a rut so narrow that criticism becomes its religion and condemnation its life. The kind that spells destruction to the very soul of youth, and to which we must wake up and fight if we are to live.

Tells Need for Thought.
We can, as parents, learn to think from the same standpoint from which our children think. We can learn to view life from the same angle, and to reckon values in the same way. By doing these things we will accomplish two important objects simultaneously, i. e., the bringing of a needed regeneration into our own lives, and the ability to use a far-seeing, instead of a shortsighted, judgment.

It is not required that we set aside our lives, but that we add greater things to them in order that we may learn how to understand and how to live, and so become qualified to counsel and guide the young lives to our our for such a short time.

Unless we understand fully the real nature of human progress as it applies to our children, and understanding it, become broad enough to interpret it and live it—not as our children would interpret it without our co-operation, but as it can be and should be interpreted and lived with our co-operation—then we as parents are failures, and, as a nation, we are in danger.

But—are we not big enough—and I address you now as one human being speaking to another—to wake up—and rally to a cause that needs the support of every red-blooded man and woman in the country.

I bespeak the cause of building a greater, bigger, finer and truer America.

Of course, we are big enough. I know that we are. You know that we are. Every father, mother and child in the country knows that we are. So now—let's wake up, and do it.

THE END.

RED CROSS BROUGHT SERVICE TO GREENE COUNTIANS, SHOWN

Approximately 400 service and ex-service men and their families were served by the Greene County Red Cross during 1926. This interesting fact was brought out by Mrs. Margaret Wead Schureman, executive secretary of the county chapter, in discussing plans for the annual Roll Call, to begin Nov. 11.

The Roll Call will be held in the county outside Xenia City. The city territory is eliminated owing to the approaching Community Chest drive in which the Red Cross will also take part.

Miss Helen Evers, public health nurse, points out the following in relation to her work and need for its support:

"The influence of the American Red Cross Nursing Service literally reaches around the world. This can be realized only when the widely varying aspects of nursing are understood. Each country has different needs, but there are types of Red Cross nurses for each and all. The high enrollment requirement means that the finest women go out, and they set up, not nursing standards alone, but standards by which the United States is also judged."

"Through schools of nursing established by the American Red Cross Nursing Service in co-operation with the official authorities of the country concerned—headed up by American Red Cross nurses as administrators and teachers until the basis is firm enough and they can be withdrawn—it has given modern nursing to hands which before lacked it, as in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Haiti. Through merciful emergency care among otherwise wretched refugees, it has helped to save the lives of thousands of children in Poland, the Baltic States, Hungary, the Balkans, Siberia and Greece, and child welfare stations have been left behind a legacy to the people."

Through public health nurses and instructors in home hygiene and care of the sick, drawn from its enrollment, the populace is being educated for health in the Philippines, the Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

DIVORCES GRANTED AND NEW PETITIONS OFFERED IN COURT

Grace McComas has been granted a divorce from Oscar McComas in Common Pleas Court on grounds of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. Plaintiff was ordered restored to her former name of Armstrong and granted $320 to cover expenses of court action.

Divorce was given John Bickford from May Bickford, the court finding the latter guilty of gross neglect of duty and cruelty. Each party to the action was ordered barred from dower in the other's property.

John Mangano has been granted a divorce from Leona Mangano on grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years.

TWO SUE FOR DIVORCE

Her husband is insanely jealous of her, has falsely accused her of improper conduct and on November 8, 1926 threatened to shoot her with a revolver. Ethel John charges in a suit for divorce from LeRoy John, filed in Common Pleas Court. Plaintiff charges extreme cruelty. They were married June 27, 1923 and have one child, Edgar LeRoy, aged 2. Plaintiff asks to be granted attorney's fee, permanent alimony, custody of the child and an injunction restraining the defendant from disposing of her household goods.

Suit for divorce charging gross neglect of duty has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Coda M. Hillard against Harry L. Hillard. They were married September 10, 1921. No children were born of the marriage. Plaintiff claims they have lived separately since March 1926. She seeks to be restored to her former name of Henden and asks for a restraining order preventing her husband from interference.

THE YEAR OF WONDERS

Be glad that you have lived this long, for you have seen the Year of Wonders. In all history, no time, no sequence of events has dragged in its train the prodigious social, mental and moral transformations that you, who have beheld the world war come and go, have witnessed.

Having lived to see the Year of Wonders, it is now for you to muse on the ferocious spectacle of bitterness, war, hatreds mountains high, assassinations by the millions, on the red battlefields of France, Belgium, Russia, Austria, Italy. Out of these infinite calamities that deformed men's minds as well as their souls, you now behold faster railroad trains, more luxurious hotels, more diamonds for all classes, everywhere more automobiles, the palatial rebuilding of city after city, and where the fathers were content with wooden walls and varnished floors, we demand marble, onyx, bronze, lapis lazuli.

The more violent the war, the greater always the change in the ways of living, thinking, acting. Set that down as a puzzling fact, bringing in the Year of Wonders. And so, out of all these dooms deep as hell, not of these millions on millions of bloody deaths, world without end, has come the strange blossoming, exotic as the jungles of the Tropics, the new materialism called by men "Progress."

Unriddle this riddle, and you are greater than the wise brow of Bacon and Socrates combined. The barbaric display of unprecedented luxuries, squandering, riotousness, taking rise out of universal misery, shame and disaster beyond the knowing, is the outstanding fact of the Year of Wonders in which you are now living.

America might well, like Edward III at the time of the black plague that took its toll of 15,000,000 lives, sing the nursery rhyme, "Hey, hey, daffy down dilly," and picking up the lady's garter on the ballroom floor clasp it gallantly on his own leg, with the merry quip, "Fe, fi, fo, fum, evil to him that evil thinks."

And in the riot of folly, women went crazy and even the priests were garbed as fobs. We have pictures of our own, rivaling Edward's, and if you doubt it, look round you, in the Year of Wonders.

MOTHER WHO FAILED

While the ship master was delivering himself of the above observations, up in San Francisco, about the general prosperity of this country, down in Los Angeles a mother was ending her own life and those of her three children because she felt they were incapable of meeting the exigencies of life. Life's difficulties loomed too large, in her mind, and she resolved to end it all. So we may talk about everybody being happy, everybody having a job and everybody being prosperous, but that does not make it so. There are always those who from some reason or other have failed to board the prosperity train. They see others riding by, but for them there seems not even a footpath left. They see others eating of the fruit of the land, but for them there seems to be nothing but crumbs and few at that. They see others with warm and beautiful clothes, but nothing but rags of castoffs ever seems to be available. "The poor ye have always with you," the Bible says, and it surely is true. In the midst of plenty there are always those who are hungry and cold. It is partly due to the conditions of society, and partly to their own lack of competence. Whatever the cause, it is society's duty to help them and to assist them in reorganizing their lives so that the sun may shine again for them, and the zest for living may have sufficient appeal to make them want to keep up the fight.

DEMOCRACY AND ROYALTY

There have been times when officialdom in Washington especially in the White House, has been charged with apeing royalty. In one administration, years ago, the first lady of the land was accused of trying to introduce royal customs and usages into the presidential mansion. However this may be, no such charge can be made against Mrs. Coolidge. The other day when the Queen of Roumania graced the White House table by her presence, the first real reigning Queen ever to sit there, the guest was resplendent in the decorations of her station. She wore three famous strands of pearls, her diamond star of the Order of Carol, and her diamond tiara. Mrs. Coolidge's only jewelry was her plain gold wedding ring. The Queen appeared with bobbed hair while the first lady of the land wears her hair in the old-fashioned way—the way that makes it the crowning glory of a woman.

Some folks object to our entertainment of Queen Marie and characterize it as "kow-towing," but surely there was no kow-towing in the official dinner which this country tendered her and her princelings the other evening at the White House, where President and Mrs. Coolidge as host and hostess on behalf of the American people, met her as plain Americans, and gave not the slightest intimation that her presence added any more to the importance of the occasion than had their guest been anyone else of equal intelligence and behavior.

DENNY THOUGHTS

Those who sink into the habit of scrutinizing other person's general behavior and passing judgment upon what they do and leave undone, do not thereby improve themselves, and work out their own perfection, for they do not always have sufficient sense of justice to avoid in themselves what they condemn in others.

Nevertheless, to observe and blame faults in others is a good way to become conscious of our own.

The Theatre

James K. Hackett has made his bow to his world audience and given the center of the stage to death. He succumbed to heart disease in Paris, Monday with his wife, the former Beatrice H. Beckley, London, at his bedside.

Tragedy stalked onto the stage of the famous old Drury Lane theater in London in the form of a messenger bearing news of the death of Hackett. The news came while actors and actresses were rehearsing for a Shakespearean performance Tuesday in which Mr. Hackett was to have appeared before King George and Queen Mary. The performers were so upset by the news that the rehearsal was postponed.

Hackett's most notable successes were "Othello" and "Macbeth." Among his early successes were "The Prisoner of Zenda," and its sequel, "Rupert of Hentzau," and "The Pride of Jennico," in the late '90s under the management of Daniel Frohman. It was not until 1914 that he essayed Shakespearean roles. He became an actor-manager, leasing two theaters in New York and forming co-partnerships in Chicago, Boston and London. Hackett was born at Wolf Island, Ont., Sept. 6, 1869 of American parents. His debut was made at the Park Theater, Philadelphia, in 1892 and the following year he became leading man at the New York Lyceum. In 1897 he married Mary Manning, well-known actress, and they were divorced several years later. He married Miss Beckley in 1911. Three years after his second marriage, while playing in London, he was notified that he had inherited the bulk of a $1,000,000 estate left by a niece, Mrs. Minnie Hackett Trowbridge.

In an East Side, New York, boarding house of 1900, which has been built in the spacious Fox studios in New York City, the famed stage play, "The Music Master" is now being filmed. The photoplay version will follow the stage presentation closely, it is announced. After two years of consideration of noted actors of the spoken and silent screen, Alec B. Francis, veteran screen

Benjamin, San Francisco advertising woman, to study commercial art in a California school.

"Thrill after thrill," she exclaimed after a trip downtown. "First, there were the big buildings; stores where you can make selections without searching through a mail order catalogue. And a horse and wagon on First Avenue—and to think I had to come all the way from Alaska to see it! We have only trucks and autos in Sitka."

Her first "thrill" came when she stepped from the steamer here and discovered that Seattle people "look just like Alaskans do."

"Somehow I thought they would be different," she said. "But the only difference I could see is that the girls here use a little more paint and powder than they do in Alaska."

BLACK EYE WORTH $1,500

DEFIANCE, O., Nov. 10.—Hugo Schmitt, a farmer of Tiffin Twp., values a black eye at $1,500. At least he has sued his neighbor Edward J. Nagel, for that amount in Defiance County courts. Then Schmitt filed the suit for damages.

Today's Talk

JOHN G. SHEDD

Recently a very notable American died. A fine, quiet gentleman and a leader of men.

He was Chairman of the board of Marshall Field & Company, Chicago, when he died, and its former President. He began under Field when he was about twenty-one years of age. His first job was as stock boy at the salary of $10 a week. At his death he had rounded out fifty years of continuous service.

When the writer of this Talk came out of college, he went to the great store of Marshall Field & Company and applied for a job. The man who talked with him was the subject of this sketch.

"We are very glad to have bright college boys enter our employ," said Mr. Shedd. "We favor boys that come from the country. I will be very glad to start you out at $10 a week in the stock room—but, of course, you will come into our employ with the intention of making it your life work."

The writer, who was quite hungry, with great regret, replied that he would be glad to take the job and give the best that was in him but that he had no intention of agreeing to spend the rest of his days in that great business. And so, perhaps, the successor of John G. Shedd than and there disappeared from fame and fortune. Mr. Shedd was born on a farm in New England. One day he was carrying some maple sap through the woods when he stumbled and fell. He was drenched. That woke him up to the fact that he was not cut out to be a great farmer. And so he went to a small town in Vermont, where he worked for $1.50 a week and board. Later he arrived in Chicago, met Marshall Field, who liked the boy and who gave him a job. His rise was rapid.

The notable thing about John G. Shedd was that he was a great "watcher" for men. He would walk about the store, and when he saw a chap who interested him, he would stand and watch him. If he recognized unusual courtesy or kindness, or overheard bits of sales talk that showed interest and enthusiasm, he would later send for the chap, talk with him, then grade him and file his name away—marked for promotion.

There is no store in the world today where greater courtesy and consideration for customers is shown than in the great establishment of Marshall Field & Company.

TRUE ACCOUNT OF BLACK-FISH'S DEATH

Colonel James Collier is the authority for what is claimed to be the true particulars relative to the death of the noted Indian chief, Blackfish, who claimed Oldtown as his home. The evidence upon which Mr. Collier founded his statement is conceived to be such as to place the truth of it beyond dispute.

In June, 1788, a party of Shawnee Indians commanded by Blackfish made a marauding expedition to Kentucky, and at the headquarters of Paint Lick Creek, then in Madison County, they made an attack upon the house of a man named Stinson. It was Sunday morning and Stinson's boy, who lived away from home, had returned about sunrise.

When near the house he gave a shout to arouse the family that they could let him in, and as his sister opened the door for that purpose, the Indians rushed in after the boy and shot at Stinson and his wife, who were in bed, mortally wounding the latter and severely wounding Stinson in the thigh.

Stinson jumped from the bed and grappled with the leader of the party. At this instant the boy grasped his father's gun, which frightened the party, seven or eight in number, and they fled for the door, assisted in their exit by Polly, Stinson's daughter, who violently pushed the last ones on those ahead and sent them pell-mell out of the cabin, then barring the entrance.

Polly then turned and with a butcher knife, stabbed the Indian who was slowly killing her father. At the first blow the Indian raised his arm and knocked her across the room, but she came back again and fatally stabbed him. This Indian was Blackfish. In the fright of the moment, Jane, another daughter of Stinson, aged 14, jumped through the window and was captured by those outside. She remained a prisoner until 1797, where her liberation was effected at Detroit and she returned to her friends in Kentucky.

BOOKS

I look at my shelves of books and say

Here are my friends for a rainy day,
Always faithful and always true
No matter what I myself may do.
Here they are ready and neat and trim
Always on hand for my slightest whim.

Books won't quarrel and books won't sneer,
Won't borrow money and disappear
Won't flatter to sell me some worthless thing
Set up a trap which they hope to spring.

Books won't vary with every mood
Or poison my life with ingratitude.
Here are my books, and they don't get drunk,
Don't come to my room to rob my trunk,
Don't disappoint me by going wrong
Or playing false when my faith was strong.

I can always trust them for comfort when I am sick and tired of the ways of men.

Books are constant. The while I live
Courage and wisdom and strength they give.

Laughter for glad times, faith for sad,
Many an hour with them all I've had,
And whether the world praise me or blame
The books that I've cherished remain the same.

Plot peddling has become a well established business in this ball of beauty and bombast. The plot peddlers are men and women of super imagination who can tell good stories by the hour but could not write one if offered all the tea in China. They "think up" plots for novels, short stories, plays or vaudeville sketches and sell them to professional writers who have the ability to construct a story once they have the plot.

I know a plot peddler who makes the rounds of his writer friends every week. He tells me he gets most of his ideas from newspapers. "All I need is a germ," he says, "and in ten or fifteen minutes I've got a plot. For instance the papers carried a story about a mother and her daughter being found dead in their rooms, the mother bending over the daughter in a listening posture. I built a plot out of that which I sold to a well known writer of cheap fiction. He's going to make a serial out of it."

Another plot peddler I know sells ideas to the movies. He made $30,000 last year.

The Russian influence of which one hears so much in New York these days, is being felt back stage at Chanin's Forty-sixth St. Theatre, where the Greenwich Village Follies are holding forth.

Russian who dances so delightfully, has introduced the samovar, an urn used for making tea. Every night she, assisted by Olga Brunoff and Fraun Koski, two of the artists' models who are proud of their Russian ancestry, serves tea to the cast and instructs them in the operation of the samovar. Kitty Banks, one of the girls in the show, tells me that before the advent of Natavva at Chanin's she thought a samovar was a species of artichoke.

Heavy is the responsibility that rests on the shoulders of New York cops.

With a population of 7,000,000 Gotham has only 14,000 policemen, or one to every 500 citizens. The number actually on the street at any given time averages about 3,000. Some of these cops' beats are only a block or two, but others have five miles or more to cover. The total valuation of property to be guarded, according to the tax books, is more than $14,000,000,000. Thus there is one cop, counting the entire force, for every $1,000,000 worth of property. Actually, on a basis of 3,000 uniformed men on duty at a given time, there is but one uniformed policeman to every $5,000,000 worth of property.

And burglars, gangsters, gunmen, pickpockets, murderers or what have you, are numerous.

to the cooking pudding. Let continue to cook several minutes longer, still stirring, before taking from fire and cooling.

Under Crust: Into a bowl put one heaping cup of bread flour and work into it, with the finger tips, three rounded tablespoons of lard and butter mixed half in half. Then add enough cold water to form a stiff paste (about three tablespoons of water) and toss the mass out onto a floured board. With a floured rolling pin roll into circular shape. When large enough to cover a pie pan, pick it up gently and place it over an ungreased pan (it is never necessary to grease a pie pan). Stick it all over with the prongs of a fork to permit escape of steam in baking (to avoid its being raised here and there by the steam), and slip it into a very hot oven—500 degrees Fahrenheit—to bake about fifteen minutes.

Cool the crust before putting the cooled, cooked caramel filling into it. Spread the stiffly whipped, sweetened whites of three eggs over all and slip pie back into a low oven till browned—twelve minutes or longer, possibly. Serve very cold.

Tomorrow—Crocheted Bed Socks.

MITZI ADMIRE ADELAIDE'S TRANSFORMATION Jay V. Jay

You might think Mitzi had her dress on with the front side back, but if you did you'd be wrong. The yoke and the bow are supposed to be in the back. They are as fashionable as the clusters of pleats on the skirt or the high hat with the crumpled brim. She is having tea with Polly who has a hat of brown velvet and gold and is surely correct in being chilly since her cocoa-dyed squirrel coat is so smart!

They were waiting for Adelaide—you can understand why Adelaide was unavoidably detained. It isn't every day that one acquires a new head of hair. Adelaide's is the latest in transformations and she likes it so well that she may decide to grow her own, although as Mitzi says when you've already paid for a transformation what's the use of bothering with your own hair? You have to get your money's worth!

GAUTHIER OPPOSED TO ELIMINATION OF SCOUTING ELEVENS

DELAWARE, O., Nov. 10.—Instead of being a step toward better athletic relations, the elimination of scouting in intercollegiate would be a move in the opposite direction in the opinion of George Gauthier, director of athletics of Ohio Wesleyan University.

Contrary to popular conception, scouting is NOT stealing the other team's signals but instead it is strategy that is intended to strengthen the defensive play of the team which the scout is representing, Gauthier said.

"All the scout wants is the formation of the team. It is not difficult to anticipate plays once the defending team has the opponent's formation," the Wesleyan mentor asserted.

If scouting is abolished, alumni would attempt to scout on a smaller scale and send their "information" to their alma mater. It would not be long before a feeling of distrust among all schools would exist, Gauthier added.

At a recent meeting of the Buckeye Athletic Association of which Wesleyan is a member, it was proposed to send only one scout once during the season to watch a team on his school's schedule. Further discussion on this proposition may be made by the organization in an effort to prevent an overdoing of the present scouting system.

EAST HIGH TEAM TO PLAY BEAVERCREEK

East High and Beaver Creek Twp. High elevens will meet in an Armistice Day football attraction at Cox Memorial Athletic Field, Thursday afternoon, the game starting at 2:30 o'clock.

By a lucky break in the last three minutes of play in which an intercepted pass was turned into the single touchdown of the game, East High won from Beaver Creek in the season 7 to 0. Aside from this piece of luck, East was entirely outplayed but managed to stave off further scoring.

Later in the season, East was defeated by the sturdy O. S. and S. O. Home team 14 to 12. Failure to kick goals after two touchdowns prevented the colored boys from having at least a tie score.

Thursday's contest will be the third of the season and in view of the earlier game, the return affair with Beaver should be a thriller.

BOWLING

Fords are again precariously perched in first position in the Xenia Bowling League by virtue of making a clean sweep of their three match games with the once-formidable Candy Kits Tuesday night. Bill Horner, with a series of 573, led both teams for high three-game total. McCoy rolled the only 200 game of the evening. Box score:

EAGLES WILL GIVE HOME TALENT SHOW

John T. Sutton, co-author and producer of "The Lady in Blue" which was successfully given in Xenia last year, has written and will produce another stage piece, under auspices of Xenia Aerie, No. 1689, Fraternal Order of Eagles, in the near future.

Rehearsal for the production will start next week. Several of the same people appearing Nov. 16 and 17 in "The Bandbox Revue" will appear in Mr. Sutton's work. Mr. Sutton finished writing the piece this week and is promising the Xenia public something different in the way of home-talent stage work.

XMAS COMMITTEES MEET AT HOME HERE

Thirty-five members of Christmas Committees of various war organizations of the state met at the O. S. and S. O. Home, Tuesday and arranged for the purchase of gifts for the pupils.

Organizations represented were: G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, W. R. C., Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, Legion Auxiliary and Daughters of Veterans.

Members of committees from the first three named organizations arranged for giving each state ward a book, with a year's subscription to two magazines for each cottage and the donation of several books to the Home Library.

Women of the W. R. C., Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, Legion Auxiliary and Daughters of Veterans plan to give each child a present, the entire lot being divided among the organizations. Mrs. Whitehorn, Columbus, department president of the W. R. C., and several other state officers attended the meeting.

LIMITED HUNTING MAY CAUSE INFLUX OF NIMRODS HERE

Members of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association for $1 for a set of four. The culation that the state agricultural department may place a ban on hunting in several surrounding counties including Montgomery because of the epidemic of hog cholera and pneumonia.

The hunting season opens November 15 and if this order should go into effect in other counties, Greene County would experience a great influx of sportsmen, it is thought.

Accordingly the association is notifying local farmers, that because the hunting ban may become a reality, it will be best to erect posters on all farms where hunting is restricted with a printed request to gunners to ask permission of the owner before hunting on private lands.

These posters may be obtained from the fish and game organization for $1 for a set of four. The association is having a number printed upon canvas and payment for four also includes the association's dues for one year with no extra charge.

Hunters are asked to communicate with Frank Linkhart, president, or L. F. Clevenger, secretary for further information.

STRUCK BY TRUCK; PEDESTRIAN HURT

Ralph Owens, 39, Xenia Ave., is thought to have sustained possible internal injuries when he was knocked down on the Federal pike, by a truck loaded with straw on its way to the Hagar Straw Board and Paper Co. mill in Cedarville Tuesday night.

It is believed one wheel of the truck passed over his body but Dr. A. D. DeHaven, the attending physician is unable to ascertain the extent of his injuries until a further examination.

Owens was walking along a road when the accident occurred. Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville, rendered first aid and later Owens was brought to his home.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy
Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a diguified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampoo-hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair. Adv.

SPRING VALLEY

Both churches in Spring Valley will observe Sunday, November 14, as "Go to Church Day," is announced.

Sermons will be delivered by the Rev. J. F. Young, pastor of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. Harry L. Leasure, the evangelist, who is holding enthusiastic meetings at the Friends Church.

In this connection all members of both churches are being urged to attend the services.

Quality-reputation...
based on 43 years of performance

KNOWING how to buy, blend and roast coffee properly has a lot to do with the sale. Anyone who has ever tasted Kroger's Coffee knows why we sold during the past twelve months over sixteen million pounds. Importing the best direct to our warehouses, and handling every detail of preparation ourselves has won us the reputation as being the place to get good coffee—fresh, uniform and dependable coffee.

SPECULATION- OR GAMBLING?

Speculation is a tempestuous sea, fraught with uncertainties and grave possibilities. For the initiate and trained—always hazardous—for the novice, pure gambling and generally a disaster in the end.

Whenever anyone risks that, the loss of which will cripple him financially, or hazard the protection and support due those dependent on him, he is no longer a speculator but descends to the level of the gambler.

Our 6% and Safety will help you to maintain your respect for yourself, will save you from the remorse that follows indiscretion and, in 99 cases out of every 100, will give you more money.

We have the patronage of many of the best business men and capitalists of Dayton and vicinity, as well as that of small savers, and will be glad to add your name to our mounting list of patrons.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

I'M LONGING FOR YOU

Sometimes I'll have to get again a pocket full of marbles.
Some tads and flints and agates and start out to playing keeps,
For the kids are all a talkin' now, they're playin' and they're squawkin' now;
It seems 'twas only yesterday that I was winning heaps.

Sometimes I'll have to get again a dirty little cur dog,
My heart is often achin' just for one to romp and play,
For the world is full of bustle now; I bustle and I tussle now,
I need to roam the hills again and hear my cur's loud bay.

Sometimes I'll have to find again a fine bone-handled barlow,
A knife that's fine for cuttin' now's initials on a birch,
For I find I need some playin' now; at work too close I'm stayin' now,
I ought to cut a fishing pole and go to catching perch.

Sometimes I'll have to get again a bunch of dried up corn silk,
And wrap them in some paper from an old stick candy poke,
For I hate this stuff I'm smokin' now; it often gets me
chokin' now,
And it doesn't serve the purpose of the silks I used to smoke.

Sometimes I'll have to get again a table full of biscuits,
Of steaming soda biscuits and all stuff that farmers eat;
For the bread that I devour now is making life look sour now,
I long for canned molasses and for pigs with pickled feet.

Sometimes I'll have to find again a church on some old mud road,
A building old and heated with a heater burning chips,
For the churches are too fine now, they preach another line now
I don't enjoy my going like I did those old time trips.

A bus driver on the Jamestown Bus line says he can tell whether a man is going to Xenia for a hunting or a marriage license. He says it is easy to tell the hunted from the hunter.
By the way, get a hunting dog through an ad on this page.

FARM BUREAU HOLDS LEGISLATIVE MEET; XENIA MEN PRESENT

Greene County was represented by two delegates at the Farm Bureau legislative conference at Wilmington, Monday. They were Oscar E. Bradtute, former president of the Ohio and American Farm Bureau Federations, and William W. Anderson, Xenia.

The conference was the first of a series of ten being held over
Ohio this week sponsored by the Farm Bureau to build an agriculture legislative program for use during the coming General Assembly and Congress. Approximately twenty-five legislative measures of state and national importance were discussed. Each delegate was asked to write out his opinions following the conference and to mail them to the Ohio
Farm Bureau Federation.

Principal speakers at the meeting were Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and
C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of the Farm Bureau and Grange at Columbus.

"The only relief from taxation in Ohio is in economy in government," said Dyer. "The taxpayer is the one who can bring this about. He has the opportunity of reviewing local budgets in local meetings."

"The trouble is we don't fight our own battles. That's why we are getting our noses rubbed in the mud and why we shall continue to get it rubbed unless we work personally and through such organizations as the Farm Bureau and the Grange."

Speaking of the state levy, Dyer said that there is no need for such a levy if the state will conduct its affairs economically. "If the state needs additional revenue, it can reach out for taxes on unnec-essaries, a thing which it has never yet done."

"Congress should maintain its original purpose in the development of Muscle Shoals," said Chester Gray. "This was to make munitions in time of war and low priced fertilizer in times of peace.

It was not to make power as is done at present."

A plea for the merchant marine was voiced by Gray. "Any nation that is a creditor nation and a consuming nation must have its own ships in times of war."

Considerable discussion was given to farm relief through solution of the surplus problem. Delegates did not seem to have complete confidence in any bills which have been presented to Congress up to date.

Over seventy-five delegates were present from twelve southwestern counties. W. R. Lewis, president of the Clinton County Farm Bureau, presided, and L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, aided in leading the discussion.

FORMER XENIAN IS DEAD IN FLORIDA

HONEY LOU

by Beatrice Burton
author of "LOVE SONGS" and "HER MAN" ETC.
© JOHNSON FEATURES INC., 1926

REA: HIS FIRST:
HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary to old "GRUMPY" WALLACK, head of the Wallack Fabric Mills.

"Grumpy" hired Honey Lou, not only because she is quick and clever, but because she is pretty and pleasant to have around, so he says. Everyone at the place likes Honey Lou, from ANN LUDLOW, the office vamp, to JOE MEAD, CWS, the shipping clerk. But Honey Lou is half afraid of Joe Meadows, without exactly knowing why.

Young JACK WALLACK comes to work in his father's mills to learn the business "from the ground up." He falls in love with Honey Lou and she with him. But when he drives her home in his car and tries to kiss her, one night, she slaps his face and leaves him. Later he apologizes and they become good friends.

When he meets Honey Lou's gentle well-bred mother and her half-sister, MARGRET MOODY, he realizes that she has been as carefully reared as any of the girls in his own world outside the mills. One night Honey Lou meets one of his friends, ANGELA ALLEN, who lives next door to the Wallack family.

She feels sure that Angela is in love with Jack and is surprised when she has an invitation from her to a birthday dinner party in his honor.

Mrs. Huntley makes Honey Lou an elaborate party dress, all lace and rose-colored crepe, and a little wreath to wear in her hair. But when Honey Lou arrives at the house and finds only six plainly-dressed guests instead of the big party she expected, she realizes how overdone she is and wishes the earth would swallow her up.

Angela persuades her to take two cocktails, telling her that they are not much more than fruit juice. Honey Lou drinks them and, overcome by the liquor and the heat and the excitement, faints dead away. And so she does not hear the saintly Angela tell Jack Wallack, when she took several drinks, telling her "hard-boiled."

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER VIII

"THE next thing," he knew Honey Lou was stretched out on a large and downy bed that felt like a cloud beneath her aching body. She slowly raised her eyelids. They felt as heavy as lead and it took all of her strength to get them open.

A fog seemed to hang before her eyes. Through it she could see the green walls and curtains of Angela's bedroom. But how had she come there? Then she remembered taking the cocktails. After that, when her head had been spinning, she remembered that everything seemed to be a blank.

"I shouldn't have drunk it," she thought. "I didn't want it." She slipped back into her half-sleep. Voices roused her.

They came from in to her from the hall outside the room where she lay—Mrs. Clemens' high shrill voice and the gentle tones of Angela.

"How do you happen to know this Huntley girl?" Suzanne Clemens was asking.

"I don't know her. I don't know her from Adam," Angela answered. "I asked her here tonight because Jack wanted me to. She works in his father's office, you know."

There was silence for a minute or two. Then Suzanne Clemens spoke again.

"Well, Jack is sure off his onion about her," she said. "He spent fifteen perfectly good minutes tonight telling me how wonderful she is, and how she wouldn't think of petting or drinking or playing cards. So I sure had to laugh when I saw her take her cigarette and her gin like an old hand. I wonder what he thinks of her now?" Her words ended in a silvery giggle.

Honey Lou sat up on the bed. The room swam around her.

"I'm not an old hand at such things," she thought dizzily. "I'm going right out and tell them so. They've got to know that those drinks I had tonight were the first ones I ever had in my life. I can't let Jack think I'm a rowdy."

She put her feet out on the floor and staggered across the room. She floundered out into the hall. She was very sick and dizzy.

"Terribly sick!" she heard her own voice moan above the ringing in her ears.

Then everything went black before her eyes and she felt herself falling—falling. Darkness closed over her, like night.

the black-and-nickel roadster purring its way across the town, leaving the lights of the Allen house far behind it.

Honey Lou was driving very slowly. His left hand gripped the steering wheel. His right arm was around the small limp figure of the girl whose fragrant head lay on his shoulder. The night wind lifted her hair and blew a strand of it across his cheek.

He glanced down at her—at this girl who had made him believe she was better than other girls. In the darkness he could just make out the white glimmer of her face, with its closed eyes and its lips parted with her slow, soft breathing.

"Sleeping it off," he said to himself, with some bitterness. But Honey Lou was not asleep. She was not quite awake, either. She felt drugged and heavy and dizzy, but she knew where she was.

She had no recollection of leaving the Allen house. She could not remember getting into Jack's car, but she knew perfectly that she was in it, alone with him now. And he was—what was it that little Suzanne Clemens had said—"off his onion" about her!

She opened her heavy eyes and saw his face close to hers, outlined against the star-powdered midnight sky. She put up one of her hands and pulled his head down to hers. She never would have done it if it had been herself, and Jack Wallack knew it.

Her voice was thick and sleepy. "Kiss me, boy!" said Honey Lou. She never would have said it if she had been herself. And Jack Wallack knew that, too.

The darkness hid the look of bitterness that was written on his face. Disgusted with her, but half in love with her still, he bent his blond head over Honey Lou's dark one. As if he could not help himself, he pulled her closer to him and his mouth closed down hard over her rose-colored mouth.

He kissed her, despising himself for it while he was doing it. "I ought to tell him how I happened to take the second cocktail," Honey Lou thought drowsily. "How I would have offended Miss Allen if I hadn't taken it."

But she didn't tell him. She was too tired to talk—too tired to do anything but stay there in his encircling arm.

Tomorrow would do. She could explain everything to him then. It was a long time before Honey Lou had another chance to tell him about Angela and the cocktail.

The night before seemed like a wild dream to Honey Lou when she woke up the next morning. She could remember parts of the night's happenings and there were parts that were a blank to her.

For instance, she had no recollection of coming up the stairs to the flat. But she could remember that Margaret helped her take off her clothes and get into bed. She could remember that the bed had seemed to rock like a canoe in midocean.

She raised herself on her elbow and looked around the room, pearl gray in the morning light. Over the foot of her bed the rose-pink party dress hung like a limp ghost.

One the other side of the room Margaret's bed was tumbled and empty.

"I suppose she's gone down to the hospital already," she said to herself. "I wonder what time it is."

While she was wondering the door opened and Margaret came in. She had on her new winter coat and the hat she wore when she went to church or to a show with Steve Mayhew.

"Where are you going, all wrapped up like a broken arm?" Honey Lou asked, and then it came to her that this was Sunday.

"To church," Margaret answered, and sat down on the side of the bed.

"Honey Lou," she said solemnly, "you came home—drunk last night."

That was like Margaret. Not to beat about the bush, but to come straight to the point.

Honey Lou stared at her. "Does Mother know?" she asked, her voice only a thin whisper.

Margaret shook her head.

"She'd gone to bed," she answered. "So had I. But I woke up when I heard Jack Wallack bringing you up the stairs, and I let you in."

"What did he say? What did Jack say?" the younger girl asked anxiously.

But before Margaret had time to answer the door of the little white room opened once more and Mrs. Huntley came in.

"Well," she said, smiling at Honey Lou, "you must have had a wonderful time last night to sleep so late this morning."

"I did," Honey Lou replied. There was a little catch in her voice. "I had a perfectly beautiful time."

Mrs. Huntley's eyes shifted their clear gaze to the rose-colored dress on the foot of the bed. "And wasn't your dress all right?" she asked brightly. She picked it up, shook it out and hung it in the closet.

"It was just perfect," Honey Lou told her, without batting an eye. Not for worlds would she have told her anything else.

"I knew it would be," her mother said. "I know what people wear to a dinner party. Well, tell me all about it. How many were there? What did you do, dance?"

The girl shook her brown head. "Played cards and talked," she said shortly. "We had a good time."

She turned her face to the wall with its rose-patterned paper. There was stillness in the room for a moment, broken only by the rustling tissue paper as Mrs. Huntley packed the wreath of chiffon roses away in a drawer of the dresser.

"Mother," Honey Lou said suddenly. She was sitting up in bed now, her small heart-shaped face very white above her pink muslin nightgown. "Mother, I got—tipsy last night."

She saw her mother's shoulders jerk as she turned away from the old dresser.

"What do you mean?" "Just what I said. Don't look at me like that. It wasn't my fault," Honey Lou faltered. "There were cocktails to drink—and I had two. I thought they were fruit punch at first. Then, after I found out that they were cocktails, I had another. I just couldn't get out of taking it. Angela Allen almost forced it on me."

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Huntley cut in. Her voice was harsh with strain. "No one can force anything on you that you don't want. How many did she take?"

Honey Lou had no idea how many of the little orange-colored drinks Angela had taken. She could not remember seeing her take even one of them. The more she thought it over the more certain she was that Angela had not drunk at all. That was queer, wasn't it? "I'll have to ask Jack about it," she said to herself.

But on the next day she had no chance to ask him about it. She did not even see him.

On the next day—which was Tuesday—she caught a flying glimpse of him as he drove his car out of the courtyard at five in the afternoon.

"Why doesn't he come up to see me?" she wondered. "What can be the matter with him?"

Ann Ludlow asked her that very question toward the end of the week.

"What's the matter with your friend Jack Wallack?" she inquired on Friday noon when Ann and Honey Lou were having their daily gossip-feast, as they called it. "He's giving you the run around, isn't he?"

Honey Lou shrugged her shoulders and managed one of her smiles. "I reckon he's thrown me down, Ann," she said, as lightly as she could.

"You should worry," Ann comforted her. "There's plenty more mothers got sons, you know."

Honey Lou thought it all over that night, as she started home through the winter twilight.

Usually she loved that journey home at night. She was a town girl and the sights and sounds of town thrilled her the way the sight of mountains will thrill the hill-born—the way the sight and sound of the sea will content those who have spent their lives on ships.

But that night her ears were deaf to the great music of the traffic, and her eyes were blinded to the golden shop windows, with their glittering Christmas wares and their green Christmas wreaths. She went along, deep in her own thoughts.

What could she have done to make Jack Wallack behave toward her as if she were an utter stranger to him? Was it because she had drunk those two drinks and "gassed out"? Or was it because she had let him kiss her in his car on the way home? What was the old saying that her mother was always quoting—the old saying about men who "kiss and ride away"? Honey Lou gave her shoulders a shrug.

"Well, I reckon that's just what they do," said Honey Lou to herself, and she made up her troubled mind that she would not care. She would not care.

saw the building literally lifted from its foundation, bumped over the ground in a series of grinding roars and then dumped into the grove of trees. Johnny logged it all the faster. He staggered into the home of the Rev. W. S. Heigham, nearby, and blurted:

"The school house has been blown away. Telephone everybody."

The grinding crash of broken timbers had already acted as a warning to the village. It could be heard above the roar of the wind and the thrashing of trees. In a few minutes the whole village of some 800 people was on its way to the hill where the school house had stood.

Children, some hurt, some merely terror-stricken, were already beginning to emerge from the wreckage as the first of the rescuers reached the hill.

Two physicians—Dr. George D. Heath and Dr. Thomas F. Owen—were among the first to arrive. They dispatched word to Washington for ambulances and doctors. They had seen enough in a few minutes to know that there was work aplenty.

Two ministers, the Rev. Father Ward and Rev. Greenwall, were also soon on the scene. The Catholic priest gave several of the children the last rites of the church there amid the wreckage.

Two country hotels and the village newspaper office were turned into temporary hospitals. As fast as he children could be extricated, they were carried to the village proper and later the injured were placed in fast automobiles and hurried to Washington hospitals, thirty-five miles away.

One little fellow—Samuel Berry, bulance that carried him went—is alive today because the am-fast enough to the hospital. The boy had one arm literally torn from his body, besides suffering a fractured skull. Physicians said today he had a chance for recovery.

The stories of the survivors are virtually all the same. Miss Ethel Grapes, the 22-year-old school teacher, in charge of thirty-five primary pupils, who was badly injured, although not seriously, said:

"It had been raining most of the day and, a little before three o'clock, the wind seemed getting stronger. I heard a rumbling noise and looked out of the win-

ing through the air. Everything was whirling around and around. I guess I lost consciousness, for the next thing I knew, I was lying on the ground and there was a child lying across me."

Duluth Lays 967,214 Square Yards of Concrete Pavements

Several years ago Duluth, Minnesota, began to pave streets with concrete. It has continued to do so every year since.

Last year, street paving awards were one hundred per cent concrete. When present contracts are completed, the city will have 967,214 square yards of this permanent pavement.

Property owners say that concrete is ideal for fine residential streets, as well as in the business districts, where heavy grinding traffic soon wears out other pavements.

They have found that concrete requires practically no maintenance, that it is safe to drive on, wet or dry, and that the extreme range of temperature common in Duluth has no effect on its durability.

Concrete also has a pleasing, light gray color, which makes it the aristocrat of pavements.

These are some of the reasons why more than 1,000 cities and towns laid concrete streets in 1925.

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy.

A NATION'S LOVE STORY

In a mighty crisis Edward Everett Hale took a colossal theme and with it wrote the nation's greatest love story. Lieutenant Nolan, his hero, cursed his land that gave him birth and received the terrible sentence of banishment for life.

For 56 years—from youth to white-haired age—the loneliest man in the world sailed the seas to Ports of God-knows-where, but no merciful helmsman ever steered Nolan's ship into the Port of Home.

Mother and sweetheart gave their lives to gain his release, but he still remained

"THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY"

William Fox, with such a theme, has achieved his most genuine and sincere motion picture production. It is

"AS NO MAN HAS LOVED"

Besides being an epic of a mother's devotion, a sweetheart's loyalty and an overwhelming love of country, it tells an epic of an Empire. Furious drama and action in the battles at sea, the capture of a slave-ship, are without parallel in any other motion picture ever produced.

FALL, DOHENY PLEAD NOT GUILTY

DEFENDANTS IN OIL SCANDAL CASES ARE ALLOWED TO PLEAD

Waive Reading Of Indictments—Lawyers
Flank Pair

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Arraigned before a court after nearly five years of contentious litigation, Albert B. Fall former secretary of the interior, and Edward L. Doheny, multimillionaire oil magnate, entered formal pleas of not guilty today to indictments charging them with conspiracy to defraud the government in the leasing of naval oil reserves in California.

The central figures in the "oil scandal" were arraigned in district supreme court on the first of four indictments growing out of the leasing of the naval oil reserves by Fall to Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair. Today's pleadings concerned only Fall and Doheny and the Elk Hills reserve in California.

The arraignments were quickly concluded. Attorneys for the defendants waived the reading of the lengthy indictment and both Fall and Doheny replied in loud, firm tones when their names were called:

"Not guilty."

They sat side by side in the court room, flanked and surrounded by an imposing array of counsel.

WIFE KILLER FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER; JURY DENIES MERCY

Conviction Carries Death
Penalty For Batavia
Farmer

BATAVIA, O., Nov. 10.—"Guilty of first degree murder without recommendation of mercy."

That was the verdict hanging over the head of Scott Workman, New Richmond farm tenant, today following the report of the jury late yesterday, shortly after the conclusion of his trial for murdering his wife, Nora, last August.

Workman had admitted he fired three shots in his wife's body while she was nursing an eight-month-old baby at her breast; he pleaded for mercy, however, on the grounds that he was insanely intoxicated at the time.

It was the first verdict of first degree murder without a mercy recommendation in Clermont Co., for thirty-six years.

A motion for a new trial will be heard Saturday, at which time the court will pass sentence.

The crime, which carries a death sentence, left nine children motherless. Seven of them now are county charges.

CANTONESE TROOPS PREPARING ATTACK

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10.—Cantonese troops are massing in the vicinity of Kluikang, preparatory to launching an attack from five directions on the city of Kluikang, according to word received here today.

Recovering from wounds, General Chian Kai Shek, leader of the Cantonese, today at Kluikang predicted that his armies would be in possession of their objective before December.

The Cantonese general declared that all troops of General Sun Chuan-fang had been driven from the province of Kiangsi and that the Anhwei armies were in disordered flight.

ONE DEAD, WOMAN MISSING AFTER FIRE

Three-Story Building Destroyed By Fire—Twenty-Five Tenants Flee Flames In Scanty Attire

CONNELSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 10.—One man was fatally injured, a woman was reported missing and a three-story building was destroyed by fire here early today.

Robert Freed, 35, tenant on the third floor of the old Newmeyer opera house here, was overcome by smoke and died an hour after being removed from the blazing building by firemen.

A Miss Guiler, who recently rented an apartment in the building, was missing following a check-up of the list of twenty-five tenants, all of whom fled scantily clad when flames menaced their apartments.

PEACE BANQUET FAILS TO QUIET STRIKE ON QUEEN'S SPECIAL

Special Car Provided For Dancer For Her To Leave
Train—Professor Petresco Takes Charge
Of Press Announcements

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN (IN COLORADO), Nov. 10.—Despite an attempted "peace banquet," the internal strife aboard the Roumanian special continued today as the royal party arrived in Denver.

Strained relations, bordering on an open rupture, existed between the royal entourage and the officials in charge of the train, following the imposing of a virtual censorship over news emanating from her majesty by Professor Nicolas Petresco, representing Premier Athanaseo of Roumania.

A special train today was the disposal of Lote Fuller, danseuse friend of Queen Marie and indirect focus of the new storm center. This car, furnished by Colonel John H. Carroll, official host to her majesty, was ready to take Mme. Fuller to New York or any other place she desired. In addition, Colonel Carroll announced that Mrs. Birkhead, press agent for Mme. Fuller, would leave the train at Denver. Miss Birkhead, charged with intrigue by Carroll, was reported improved in health since her recent nervous collapse.

STATE WANTS HALL- MILLS JURY TO VIEW MURDER LOCATION

Simpson Continues To Spring Surprises In Death Trial

COURT HOUSE, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 10.—George E. Totten, former county detective of Somerset County was the first witness called today when the seventh day of the Hall-Mills murder trial opened.

Before Totten got a chance to testify, Prosecutor Alexander Simpson asked the court if the jury would be allowed to visit the scene of the double murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills four years ago.

Judge Charles W. Parker said he would let the jurors enter on this matter at the noon recess.

Simpson, who is prosecuting the state's case in his inimitable way, has provided one thrill after another, and the end is not yet.

He almost confounded the defense by the unorthodox, helter-skelter way in which he presented the case. Then he wanted the court to adjourn to a hospital, as the testimony of his star witness, Mrs. Jane Gibson, who became very ill, could be obtained. He put "surprise witnesses" on the stand who had never been heard of in the case.

He "kidnaped" Mrs. Gibson from Somerville and put her in his own hospital in Jersey City.

And, finally last, yesterday, he capped the climax by suddenly producing from a brown cardboard box a grisly exhibit in the form of a plaster head and bust of a human figure, which he placed on the witness stand so Dr. Otto H. Schulze autopsy expert could illustrate for the jury just how the beautiful young choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, was shot to death and her tongue, larynx, windpipe and throat muscles—all the organs used in singing—cut from her throat.

VIOLETS IN NOVEMBER

OTTAWA, O., Nov. 10.—Chill November! With the temperature standing at thirty-three degrees, one above freezing, did not prevent Misses Marie Utendorf and Lucille Reese from wearing violet corsets, grown along Ottawa hedges this past week. The blooms were picked by two school children, who presented them to their "school marm." They were reported as being a healthy growth, with exceptionally long stems.

AUTHORITIES SEEK STATE PEN CONVICT FOLLOWING ESCAPE

Donahay Exonerates
Warden Of Blame—
May Punish Guard

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—Authorities today continued their search for Oliver Glaspy, Athens County convict, the only one of the thirteen prisoners who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary Monday afternoon, still at large.

Governor Vic Donahay today had exonerated Warden Thomas of all blame in connection with the escape of these prisoners. The governor agreed with the warden that full responsibility for the break rested upon the shoulders of Guard Captain George Bennett.

Bennett, who was in charge of the inner gates when the prisoners escaped, violated a standing rule by opening both gates at the same time, the governor and warden agreed.

"Bennett will have to be disciplined," said Donahay.

"The morale of the entire organization depends on it. Warden Thomas did his full duty Monday. He has not done a thing to be censured for."

Unless infection develops, all injured prison employees, guards and prisoners will recover, it was announced.

Warden Thomas voiced the desire that the Ohio legislature this winter enact legislation providing that prisoners serving life for murder shall be electrocuted, by later order of court, if they attempt to escape from prison. The warden also favored imposition of life sentences upon prisoners serving short terms who participate with life-termers in an attempt to escape.

SENATE MEETS AS IMPEACHMENT COURT TO TRY FEDERAL JUDGE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—For the tenth time in American history the senate met today as a court of impeachment to try former Federal Judge George W. English, of Illinois, on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors in office—but without a prisoner at the bar.

As Judge English resigned from the federal bench a week ago, administration leaders agreed to adjourn the court until December 13, to allow the house time in which to recommend dismissal of the charges.

This procedure would follow a precedent established in 1799, when impeachment charges

SOLEMN CATHEDRAL RITES UNITE ROYAL COUPLE IN BELGIUM

Prince Leopold And Princess Astrid Are Re-Married

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—As the bells of the cathedral of Sainte Gudule rang out and guns boomed, Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium was today married to Princess Astrid of Sweden, in a solemn ceremony in the cathedral, the religious confirmation of the civil ceremony held last week in Stockholm.

Belgium was gay in its rejoicing over its new princess and no such demonstrations have been seen since that November day eight years ago, almost to the day, when the World War came to an end.

An artillery salute of twenty-one guns resounded before the royal palace at 10:46, notifying the great throngs that the wedding procession had started.

Two squadrons of guards, with colors flying, acted as an escort for the wedding party.

ROYALTY ATTENDS
Close behind their carriage came the royal coach, bearing King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and Crown Prince Leopold. In a third state carriage rode Prince Charles and Princess Ingeborg, parents of the bride, and Princess Astrid, the cynosure of all eyes and the object of much adulation.

The wedding party, after its ride through throngs of demonstrative admirers, drew up before the cathedral of Sainte Gudule and on every one of the thirty stone steps leading to the cathedral door were two lieutenants from the 78th regiment, with swords drawn, forming an arch of glittering steel beneath which the wedding party ascended to the cathedral to receive the religious benediction.

Monsieur van Roye, successor to Cardinal Mercier as primate of Belgium, greeting the party at the cathedral door, even though he had originally declined to participate in the ceremony, opposing the union because of the differences in religions. It is stated that it was on the advice of the pope that he decided to officiate.

SERVICE IS BRIEF

The wedding party proceeded up the cathedral aisle and took their places before Monsignor van Roye, near the lectern outside of the altar because the bride is not a Catholic.

Monsieur van Roye blessed the rings and performed the brief ceremony, the entire service lasting but a quarter of an hour. It was a merry party, including both royal families, that sat down to a luncheon at the palace that was the work of the highest art of Belgian chefs.

The gala day was concluded with a great reception given by the king and the queen at three this afternoon.

The prince and princess will leave for their honeymoon tomorrow. Up on their return, they will live in Bellevue palace, which comprises the left wing of the royal palace and which was formerly the home of Princess Clementine, daughter of Leopold II and now the widow of Prince Napoleon.

AGED MINER LOST; CREWS PROBE SHAFT

CAMBRIDGE, O., Nov. 10.—Completely baffled after a search of every foot of the several miles of entries in the Cleveland mine of the Cambria Colliery Coal Co., here, relief crews of searchers, headed by State Mine Inspector James Forgie, re-entered the mine today determined to find Pete Secoska, 70-year-old miner, who has been lost in the workings since early Monday morning.

Secoska's cap, safety lamp and dinner pail were found near the shaft late yesterday.

Some promise that Thursday will not bring a repetition of snow and colder weather is held out by the weather man. If forecasters can foretell what is in store for Xenia in a climatic way, Thursday will be fair.

Cloudy skies, cold weather and occasional snow flurries were scheduled for all day Wednesday.

WOMAN SWALLOWS POISON IN STORE

AKRON, O., Nov. 10.—Mrs. J. E. Robinson, 22, died in a hospital here today from the effects of poison which she swallowed in a drug store last night while several clerks watched her.

Police declare the woman committed suicide during a spell of despondency caused by a misunderstanding with her family.

PRESIDENT TRAVELING WEST TO DEDICATE LIBERTY MEMORIAL

Plans Address In Kansas City, Mo., and Visit To Kansas City, Kan.—Special Routed Over
Pennsylvania Panhandle Division

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—The train bearing the President and Mrs. Coolidge to Kansas City, arrived in Pittsburgh at 8:39 a. m., from Washington and departed at 8:48 a. m., over the Pennsylvania division of the Pennsylvania railroad.

for the second time in history, a president will visit Kansas City, Kansas.

President Coolidge, enroute to Kansas City, Missouri, to dedicate the $2,000,000 Liberty memorial erected by the residents of that city to the veterans of the world war, has agreed, following the ceremonies there, to cross the Kansas river and visit the other Kansas City, located in the state after which it is named.

It will mark the first time the president, executive has ever touched the state of Kansas since assuming the presidency.

The presidential party faces a full night and day on board train before reaching its destination. Apparently, those on board the train are about to experience their first touch of winter, for weather reports have told of snow and extreme cold in Kansas, veering rapidly east. All members of the party had been so warned shortly before starting from the damp, murky warmth of Washington.

The president faces an exceedingly busy seven hours tomorrow in Kansas City, Mo. Arriving shortly after breakfast, he will motor to the Muhleback hotel for a short rest. Then comes the dedicatory exercises at the war memorial. Following is a huge luncheon and then the visit to the sister city across the river.

At 3:30 in the afternoon he departs for the capital.

In addition to Mrs. Coolidge, the president is accompanied by Secretary of War Davis, Secretary Everett Sanders, Col. S. A. Cheney and Capt. Wilson Brown, military and naval aides and Major J. F. Coupal, official physician.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO FRAUD CHARGES

P. W. Edmiston, South Charleston, was held to the grand jury under a total of $1,000 bond when he pleaded not guilty to two counts of obtaining money under false pretenses before R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, Tuesday afternoon. In default of $500 bond on each charge he was remanded to the County Jail Edmiston passed up the privilege of a hearing and was bound over to the grand jury.

He was arrested November 3 by Deputy Sheriff John Baughn for alleged embezzlement of $466.95 from the American Loan and Realty Co.

He is charged with mortgaging cattle that he did not possess while living in Ross Twp. His arrest was the result of information furnished by Mose Cramer, Xenia head of the company, when Edmiston returned in an effort to swing another loan.

STUDENTS TRAPPED IN WRECKED SCHOOL ARE AMONG VICTIMS

More May Die—Frame
Building Crushed
By Twister

LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 10.—With a death list of seventeen, which probably will be increased to twenty by nightfall, stunned residents of Charles County began today to reconstruct some order out of the chaos that swept down from the skies late yesterday in the form of a savage, twisting tornado.

It left in its wake a narrow strip about twelve miles long and scarcely five hundred yards wide through this placid Maryland countryside and made of it a shambles which held the bodies of fourteen school children, three adults and more than forty injured.

Houses were flattened, trees uprooted, vehicles scattered, but the twister reserved most of its fury for the little frame school house that stood atop a knoll on the edge of the village. There it struck with demonic fury, lifted the two-room structure from its foundation and hurled it 150 feet away, a mass of broken timbers in a grove of weeds.

There were fifty-five children at their desks in the school house when the twister struck. Fourteen of them are dead today and a dozen others are hurt so seriously that some deaths are considered certain.

The dead:

Jackie Clark, 12; Harry Claggett, 8; Charles Edwards, Jr.; James L. Martin, 6; Mary Ellen Bowie, 7; Edward Bean, 10; Chester Gamble; Lucille Miles, 12; Mary Alice Cooksey, 12; Lillian Della; John Tearer, 10; Lester Sinclair, 7; Lucille Edwards, 10; Louis Swann, 11; Rufus Watts negro, and child; Lula Patterson negro.

ONE BOY ESCAPES
There was but one pupil in the school who escaped entirely unscathed in the destruction of the building—little "Johnny" Burr, 11. He had a desk near a window. When the building began to shake and there was the first rumble of cracking timbers, Johnny jumped out of the window and ran for help.

Before he was a hundred yards away, he looked backward and

ANTI-FASCIST PARTIES HALTED

ROME, Nov. 10.—The Italian police during the night occupied the offices of all anti-fascist parties and associations, declaring these organizations automatically dissolved by new police regulations, according to Messagero.

This is the first step taken in accordance with the drastic new regulations voted yesterday by the chamber of deputies.

JAPANESE STEAMER REPTED MISSING

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Japanese steamer Shizuan Maru is reported missing and vessels sent in search of her have reported they have been unable to find any traces of her, according to a Yokohama dispatch received here.

Lloyd's register does not record a Shizuan Maru but the Shizun Maru, of Yokohama, is listed as a vessel of 2,910 tons.

TYPO UNION WILL WELCOME MARIE

The union has invited the queen to visit Typographical Terrace, official headquarters here, and the invitation will not be withdrawn, it was said.

RUSSIAN BARITONE DIES IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Joseph Schwarz, internationally-known Russian baritone, who formerly was with the Chicago opera company, died here today. Death was due to kidney trouble, from which the singer had suffered for months.

In February, 1922, while in Chicago with the opera there, Schwarz was married Mrs. Sielkin, widow of the wealthy coffee merchant, from whom she inherited a fortune of $7,000,000.

AUTHORESS WHO SE DAUGHTER TURNED "BANDIT" TELLS WHY

Vashti Dale, in Concluding Installment, Says She Has New View of Motherhood—Need For Thought Among Parents

While Vashti Dale (Mrs. Charles Nichols) of Rock Island, Ill., was writing advice for other mothers on how to raise their children, her own daughter, over night, became the famous hoodlumed "bandit" of Rock Island. Of course Beulah isn't a bandit.

Her daughter, Beulah, 16, made bold by hooch, broke into a residence, entered the bedroom of a 75-year-old man, stripped off her clothing, dressed herself in male attire, and started out to see the world—as a man. She was arrested in another city, brought back and paroled to her mother.

Now Vashti Dale, who for many years has been a contributor to magazines and newspapers, has another view of motherhood.

This is the third installment of her story, written for EFS and The Daily Gazette.

By VASHTI DALE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926
In this article I propose to talk plainly and straight to the point, because in it will be embodied the knowledge I have gleaned from my own stupendous awakening.

And I want, more than words can express, to pass this knowledge and this awakening on to other mothers who may, in consequence, be able to avoid the heartache and sorrow that have come to us.

I want to tell you how intolerance, in the shape of "old fashioned standards" was directly responsible for Beulah's sensational experiment (for experiment it was) and in the telling I am sure that you will be able to grasp the reason which has made these talks essential to my peace of mind.

Just how and why did the intolerance in our home cause Beulah to do what she did?

Daughter Adores Dancing.
Beulah adores dancing. What normal, healthy young person does not?

And we should have made it possible for her to satisfy this normal desire in a normal, healthy way. We should have given parties for her at our home; and we should have allowed her to give parties to her young friends. Thus we would have assured ourselves that her associates were all that we desired them to be, and we would have known that hooch drinking, petting parties and joy-riding were neither thought of nor desired.

Beulah also likes the fun and work that calls for plenty of mental and physical action; and we should have made special efforts to give her this kind of fun and work. By so doing we could have turned her surplus energies into constructive channels.

Cause Goes Deep.
In short, we should have known that our standards were too old fashioned to fit her, and we should have modified them accordingly.

"But," you demand, "do you mean to tell me that these mistakes you made in bringing up your daughter are representative of the mistakes made by the average parent today?"

"Do you mean to say that these mistakes are representative of the great menace of intolerance which you have made such a point of in these talks?"

No—I do not mean this. The intolerance I mean goes deeper. It is the kind that refuses to see that dancing, flapperism and sheikism and even drinking and the greater social evils are merely the result of the urge of youth which may be turned into constructive character building or into destructive evil. It is the kind of intolerance that refuses to see the spirit because of the letter that stands in the way, the kind that lives, moves and has its being in a rut so narrow that criticism becomes its religion and condemnation its life. The kind that spells destruction to the very soul of youth, and to which we must wake up and fight if we are to live.

Tells Need for Thought.
We can, as parents, learn to think from the same standpoint from which our children think. We can learn to view life from the same angle, and to reckon values in the same way. By doing these things we will accomplish two important objects simultaneously, i. e., the bringing of a needed regeneration into our own lives, and the ability to use a far-seeing, instead of a shortsighted, judgment.

It is not required that we set aside our lives, but that we add greater things to them in order that we may learn how to understand and how to live, and so become qualified to counsel and guide the young lives to our our for such a short time.

Unless we understand fully the real nature of human progress as it applies to our children, and understanding it, become broad enough to interpret it and live it—not as our children would interpret it without our co-operation, but as it can be and should be interpreted and lived with our co-operation—then we as parents are failures, and, as a nation, we are in danger.

But—are we not big enough—and I address you now as one human being speaking to another—to wake up—and rally to a cause that needs the support of every red-blooded man and woman in the country.

I bespeak the cause of building a greater, bigger, finer and truer America.

Of course, we are big enough. I know that we are.

You know that we are. Every father, mother and child in the country knows that we are.

So now—let's wake up, and do it.

THE END.

Club women of the city, on their way to and from meetings, are urged to attend the Armistice Day Silver Tea, of Central Parent-Teacher Association at the home of Mrs. Walter R. Harner, Church and King Sts., Thursday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 5. Two hundred and fifty women are expected to enjoy the afternoon of social intercourse, refreshments and music. No reservations are needed.

ENTERTAINS CLUB

Mrs. Otto Hornick graciously entertained members of her card club at her home on E. Third St., Tuesday afternoon. Three tables were in play and Mrs. James Fletcher and Mrs. James Graham won some prizes. Mrs. J. T. Hibbert and Mrs. Sarah Eyer were presented guest prizes. A delicious luncheon followed cards.

J. F. F. Club will be entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toms, Hoop Road, Friday evening. The women will bring pickles.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Conwell and two daughters, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Conwell and daughter, Washington, C. H., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Conwell, Chestnut St.

Mrs. Mary Porter Kyle, Monmouth, Ill., who has been the guest of Mrs. Edwin Galloway several days, left Tuesday for Beavertown, O., to visit relatives. She will also be the guest of friends in Rushville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bair, W. Second St., who recently moved here from Mount Victory, are leaving soon for Fort Wayne, Ind. Mr. Bair has been transferred to Indiana by the wholesale dry goods firm with which he is connected as traveling salesman.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Shaffer, W. Market St., returned home Tuesday evening, after spending several days in Toledo, where they visited Mrs. Shaffer's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Moore. They also visited Dr. Fred Wemmer and family.

The home of Mrs. J. P. Lytle, E. Church St., will be opened to members of A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U., Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Arthur Morgan, wife of the president of Antioch College gives highlights of her recent trip abroad. The membership is urged to attend and bring a guest for the interesting program.

Miss Ella McCreary has been removed to her home on High St., from McClellan Hospital, where she recently underwent a serious operation.

Dr. A. C. Messenger, Judge S. C. Wright and Mr. Watkins Frame were among the Greene Countyans who attended the Scottish Rite work in Dayton, Wednesday.

Mrs. G. W. Kuhn is entertaining members of her card club and their husbands, for dinner and cards at her home on N. King St., Thursday evening. Six tables will be in play.

RED CROSS BROUGHT SERVICE TO GREENE COUNTIANS, SHOWN

Approximately 400 service and ex-service men and their families were served by the Greene County Red Cross during 1926. This interesting fact was brought out by Mrs. Margaret Wead Schureman, executive secretary of the county chapter, in discussing plans for the annual Roll Call, to begin Nov. 11.

The Roll Call will be held in the county outside Xenia City. The city territory is eliminated owing to the approaching Community Chest drive in which the Red Cross will also take part.

Miss Helen Evers, public health nurse, points out the following in relation to her work and need for its support:

"The influence of the American Red Cross Nursing Service literally reaches around the world. This can be realized only when the widely varying aspects of nursing are understood. Each country has different needs, but there are types of Red Cross nurses for each and all. The high enrollment requirement means that the finest women go out, and they set up, not nursing standards alone, but standards by which the United States is also judged."

"Through schools of nursing established by the American Red Cross Nursing Service in co-operation with the official authorities of the country concerned—headed up by American Red Cross nurses as administrators and teachers until the basis is firm enough and they can be withdrawn—it has given modern nursing to lands which before lacked it, as in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Haiti. Through merciful emergency care among otherwise wretched refugees, it has helped to save the lives of thousands of children in Poland, the Baltic States, Hungary, the Balkans, Siberia and Greece, and child welfare stations have been left behind a legacy to the people."

Through public health nurses and instructors in home hygiene and care of the sick, drawn from its enrollment, the populace is helped, educated for health in the Philippines, the Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands and Hawaii."

EAST END NEWS

Mr. James Jones and daughters, Vashli and Audrey, Columbus Ave., were in attendance at the Antioch Baptist Church, Cincinnati, Sunday and were the guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Williams. Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Little, E. Main St., were called to Jamestown, on account of the death of Mrs. Little's uncle, Mr. Drew Venable.

Miss Anna Jenkins, Columbus Ave., is among the sick. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Clemens, Columbus Ave., had as their weekend guests, Miss Ruth Howard, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, Huntington, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and Miss Josephine Bishop, of Springfield, O.

Rev. J. H. Maxwell and wife, of Youngstown, and Prof. Joseph Maxwell, of Hartford, Conn., who were called here on account of the death of their father, the Rev. W. T. Miss Leah Gaines, E. Market St., was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Williams, Cincinnati. Mr. Joseph Lewis, of the Stringtown Road, is among the sick.

East High School will observe Armistice Day, Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, when E. T. Banks, Dayton, will address the student body. Music will be furnished by the school chorus. Patrons and friends of East High are invited to join in the program.

All members of Daniels Relief Corps, No. 228, are requested to be present Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the state inspector will be present, at 49 Taylor St., by order of the president.

Road, two miles west of Xenia last Thursday, confirms the belief of Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, coroner, that the body was that of Washington Battleton, colored, former infantry inmate.

Battleton wandered away from the infirmary several months ago. He was attired similar to clothing found on the body with the exception that his coat was missing. The coat found Tuesday on the Cline farm, off the Fairground Road, is an eighth of a mile from the scene of the finding of the body.

Berry-pickers frequently camp at the spot and there was evidence that the owner of the coat had camped there, it is said. It is believed the man left his coat there while on a berry-hunting expedition and left before returning to the "lean-to."

Evidence that berries had been placed in the bucket found near the body strengthens this theory and Coroner Haines believes the finding of the coat completes the identification of the skeleton as that of Battleton. The remains were buried in Woodland Cemetery last Friday.

DIVORCES GRANTED AND NEW PETITIONS OFFERED IN COURT

Grace McComas has been granted a divorce from Oscar McComas in Common Pleas Court on grounds of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. Plaintiff was ordered restored to her former name of Armstrong and granted $320 to cover expenses of court action.

Divorce was given John Bickford from May Bickford, the court finding the latter guilty of gross neglect of duty and cruelty. Each party to the action was ordered barred from dower in the other's property.

John Mangan has been granted a divorce from Leona Mangan on grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years.

Excellent for children's sore throat and coughs. 35¢, 60¢ and $1.00. At all good drugists.

FORTY AND EIGHT SPONSORING PARTY FOR HOME PUPILS SOON

Elaborate plans are progressing toward completion for the annual Thanksgiving party sponsored by the Grand Vulture of Ohio, 40 and 8 Society, for the benefit of children of the O. S. and S. O. Home Saturday, November 20, Colonel T. E. Andrews, superintendent of the institution, announces.

Program will begin at 3 o'clock, weather permitting, with a dress parade by the Home Cadet Battalion. Following this, members of the society and their wives will visit the cottages and inspect the buildings, after which dinner will be served at 5 o'clock in the main dining room for all visitors and children.

At six o'clock each child will be presented with a gift and candy. Later the Bloomer School of Dancing, Springfield, will provide an entertainment in the main auditorium. Between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock the older children and guests will enjoy dancing. Music will be supplied by the Grand Vulture's own dance orchestra.

The entire Home population of 600 children will be entertained at the Thanksgiving party.

K. S. Wingate, of the Springfield chapter of the society, is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the party, assisted by Edwin R. Burke, Springfield, E. E. Sims, Columbus, and P. P. Yoder, Dayton.

PLAY WILL FEATURE ARMISTICE PROGRAM In connection with Spring Valley's Armistice Day celebration November 11, the Memorial Society of the village co-operating with the Xenia American Legion Auxiliary is sponsoring a play at the town Opera House Thursday night at 8 o'clock entitled "For Liberty's Sake."

McCorkell, as Mrs. Gray; Professor Drewis as Jack Gray, the son; Miss Helen Kyne as Nellie Gray; Ernest Reeves as General Chase; William Scarff as Howard Sherrod; Mrs. Carl Copey, the "Spirit of Democracy"; Miss Louise Fixx, the "Spirit of Liberty"; and Miss Helen Penewitt, the "Spirit of Peace."

KIWANIS MERRY ON LADIES' NIGHT

Eighty people, including forty members of Xenia Kiwanis Club and their wives and friends, enjoyed a dinner and theater party in Dayton, Tuesday evening.

The outing, taking the place of the regular club meeting, was in celebration of "Ladies' Night" a regular occasion for a special party. Dinner was served at the Hotel Gibbons. Women guests of the evening found boxes of candy at each cover.

The party ended with theater at Keith's. The affair was thoroughly enjoyed by the large delegation.

No Cold In 5 Yrs.

The writer has not had a cold in five years. He catches colds from contacts, just as others do. But at the first sneeze he takes HILL'S. I have proved that colds do not develop when one does that.

But there are other things that millions know. HILL'S checks a cold in twenty-four hours after it has developed. It ends the fever, opens the bowels, tones the entire system. It leaves one feeling better than when the cold began. HILL'S combines four of the greatest helps modern science has discovered. It was perfected by one of the world's largest laboratories. It is so efficient, so well-proved that the present owners paid $1,000,000 for it.

Nobody who knows what HILL'S can do will ever use a lesser help. Nor will they delay.

THE YEAR OF WONDERS

Be glad that you have lived this long, for you have seen the Year of Wonders. In all history, no time, no sequence of events has dragged in its train the prodigious social, mental and moral transformations that you, who have beheld the world war come and go, have witnessed.

Having lived to see the Year of Wonders, it is now for you to muse on the ferocious spectacle of bitterness, war, hatreds mountains high, assassinations by the millions, on the red battlefields of France, Belgium, Russia, Austria, Italy. Out of these infinite calamities that deformed men's minds as well as their souls, you now behold faster railroad trains, more luxurious hotels, more diamonds for all classes, everywhere more automobiles, the palatial rebuilding of city after city, and where the fathers were content with wooden walls and varnished floors, we demand marble, onyx, bronze, lapis lazuli.

The more violent the war, the greater always the change in the ways of living, thinking, acting. Set that down as a puzzling fact, bringing in the Year of Wonders. And so, out of all these dooms deep as hell, not of these millions on millions of bloody deaths, world without end, has come the strange blossoming, exotic as the jungles of the Tropics, the new materialism called by men "Progress."

Unriddle this riddle, and you are greater than the wise brow of Bacon and Socrates combined. The barbaric display of unprecedented luxuries, squandering, riotousness, taking rise out of universal misery, shame and disaster beyond the knowing, is the outstanding fact of the Year of Wonders in which you are now living.

America might well, like Edward III at the time of the black plague that took its toll of 15,000,000 lives, sing the nursery rhyme, "Hey, hey, daffy down dilly," and picking up the lady's garter on the ballroom floor clasp it gallantly on his own leg, with the merry quip, "Fe, fi, fo, fum, evil to him that evil thinks."

And in the riot of folly, women went crazy and even the priests were garbed as fops. We have pictures of our own, rivaling Edward's, and if you doubt it, look round you, in the Year of Wonders.

MOTHER WHO FAILED

While the ship master was delivering himself of the above observations, up in San Francisco, about the general prosperity of this country, down in Los Angeles a mother was ending her own life and those of her three children because she felt they were incapable of meeting the exigencies of life. Life's difficulties loomed too large, in her mind, and she resolved to end it all. So we may talk about everybody being happy, everybody having a job and everybody being prosperous, but that does not make it so. There are always those who from some reason or other have failed to board the prosperity train. They see others riding by, but for them there seems not even a footpath left. They see others eating of the fruit of the land, but for them there seems to be nothing but crumbs and few at that. They see others with warm and beautiful clothes, but nothing but rags of castoffs ever seems to be available. "The poor ye have always with you," the Bible says, and it surely is true. In the midst of plenty there are always those who are hungry and cold. It is partly due to the conditions of society, and partly to their own lack of competence. Whatever the cause, it is society's duty to help them and to assist them in reorganizing their lives so that the sun may shine again for them, and the zest for living may have sufficient appeal to make them want to keep up the fight.

DEMOCRACY AND ROYALTY

There have been times when officialdom in Washington especially in the White House, has been charged with aping royalty. In one administration, years ago, the first lady of the land was accused of trying to introduce royal customs and usages into the presidential mansion. However this may be, no such charge can be made against Mrs. Coolidge. The other day when the Queen of Roumania graced the White House table by her presence, the first real reigning Quaker ever to sit there, the guest was resplendent in the decorations of her station. She wore three famous strands of pearls, her diamond star of the Order of Carol, and her diamond tiara. Mrs. Coolidge's only jewelry was her plain gold wedding ring. The Queen appeared with bobbed hair while the first lady of the land wears her hair in the old-fashioned way—the way that makes it the crowning glory of a woman.

Some folks object to our entertainment of Queen Marie and characterize it as "kow-towing," but surely there was no kow-towing in the official dinner which this country tendered her and her princelings the other evening at the White House, where President and Mrs. Coolidge as host and hostess on behalf of the American people, met her as plain Americans, and gave not the slightest intimation that her presence added any more to the importance of the occasion than had their guest been anyone else of equal intelligence and behavior.

PENNY THOUGHTS

Those who sink into the habit of scrutinizing other person's general behavior and passing judgment upon what they do and leave undone, do not thereby improve themselves, and work out their own perfection, for they do not always have sufficient sense of justice to avoid in themselves what they condemn in others.

Nevertheless, to observe and blame faults in others is a good way to become conscious of our own.

The Theatre

James K. Hackett has made his bow to his world audience and given the center of the stage to death. He succumbed to heart disease in Paris, Monday with his wife, the former Beatrice H. Beckley, London, at his bedside.

Tragedy stalked onto the stage. The principal feminine part, the daughter, is depicted by Lois Moran, who rose to prominence in "Stella Dallas."

"The Return of Peter Grimm" fashioned from the famed Belasco-Warfield stage drama, has been selected for the Photoplay Guide of the National Board of Review, given an asterisk and recommended to the Critique Committee for consideration as an exceptional picture.

"The selection was made," says the report, "because of the fine acting, technique of production and interest of the theme. The entertainment value of the picture makes it suitable for the general audience. The asterisk is awarded only to photoplays of unusual merit."

Hackett's most notable successes were "Othello" and "Macbeth." Among his early successes were, "The Prisoner of Zenda," and its sequel, "Rupert of Hentzau," and "The Pride of Jennico," in the late '90's under the management of Daniel Frohman. It was not until 1914 that he essayed Shakespearean roles. He became an actor-manager, leading two theaters in New York and forming co-partnerships in Chicago, Boston and London.

Hackett was born at Wolf Island, Ont., Sept. 6, 1869 of American parents. His debut was made at the Park Theater, Philadelphia, in 1892 and the following year he became leading man at the New York Lyceum. In 1897 he married Mary Manning, well-known actress, and they were divorced several years later. He married Miss Beckley in 1911. Three years after his second marriage, while playing in London, he was notified that he had inherited the bulk of a $1,000,000 estate left by a niece, Mrs. Minnie Hackett Trowbridge.

In an East Side, New York, boarding house of 1900, which has been built in the spacious Fox studios in New York City, the famed stage play, "The Music Master" is now being filmed. The photoplay version will follow the stage presentation closely, it is announced. After two years of consideration of noted actors of the spoken and silent stage, Alec B. Francis, veteran screen

SALLY'S SALLIES

ALASKAN GIRL GOT THRILL FROM HORSE AND WAGON IN U. S.

SEATTLE, Nov. 10.—Ordinarily a horse and wagon, even in this gasoline age, attracts very little attention, but to Hazel Sarvela, pretty 23-year-old Alaska girl, it was quite a sight.

Miss Sarvela was born in Sitka, Alaska and it was the first time she had ever been "outside" in all her life. She is on her way to California, accompanied by Miss Myrth

Benjamin, San Francisco advertising woman, to study commercial art in a California school.

"Thrill after thrill," she exclaimed after a trip downtown. "First, there were the big buildings; stores where you can make selections without searching through a mail order catalogue. And a horse and wagon on First Avenue—and to think I had to come all the way from Alaska to see it! We have only trucks and autos in Sitka."

Her first "thrill" came when she stepped from the steamer here and discovered that Seattle people "look just like Alaskans do."

"Somehow I thought they would be different," she said. "But the only difference I could see is that the girls here use a little more paint and powder than they do in Alaska."

Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.

What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth for ever.

The sun also riseth, and the sun goeth down, and hasteth to his place where he arose.

The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and he wind returneth again according to his circuits.—Ecclesiastes, 1:2-6.

BLACK EYE WORTH $1,500

DEFIANCE, O., Nov. 10.—Hugo Schmitt, a farmer of Tiffin Twp., values a black eye at $1,500. At least he has sued his neighbor Edward J. Nagel, for that amount in Defiance County courts. The two men quarreled over the use of farm machinery. They exchanged blows. Nagel was arrested and pleaded guilty to assault and battery and paid $41.70 in a fine and costs. Then Schmitt filed the suit for damages.

Today's Talk

JOHN G. SHEDD

Recently a very notable American died. A fine, quiet gentleman and a leader of men.

He was Chairman of the board of Marshall Field & Company, Chicago, when he died, and its former President. He began under Field when he was about twenty-one years of age. His first job was as stock boy at the salary of $10 a week. At his death he had rounded out fifty years of continuous service.

When the writer of this Talk came out of college, he went to the great store of Marshall Field & Company and applied for a job. The man who talked with him was the subject of this sketch.

"We are very glad to have bright college boys enter our employ," said Mr. Shedd. "We favor boys that come from the country. I will be very glad to start you out at $10 a week in the stock room—but, of course, you will come into our employ with the intention of making it your life work."

The writer, who was quite hungry, with great regret, replied that he would be glad to take the job and give the best that was in him but that he had no intention of agreeing to spend the rest of his days in that great business. And so, perhaps, the successor of John G. Shedd than and there disappeared from fame and fortune!

Mr. Shedd was born on a farm in New England. One day he was carrying some maple sap through the woods when he stumbled and fell. He was drenched. That woke him up to the fact that he was not cut out to be a great farmer. And so he went to a small town in Vermont, where he worked for $1.50 a week and board. Later he arrived in Chicago, met Marshall Field, who liked the boy and who gave him a job. His rise was rapid.

The notable thing about John G. Shedd was that he was a great "watcher for men." He would walk about the store, and when he saw a chap who interested him, would stand and watch him. If he recognized unusual courtesy or kindness, or overheard bits of sales talk that showed interest and enthusiasm, he would later send for the chap, talk with him, then grade him and file his name away—marked for promotion.

There is no store in the world today where greater courtesy and consideration for customers is shown than in the great establishment of Marshall Field & Company.

TRUE ACCOUNT OF BLACK-FISH'S DEATH

Colonel James Collier is the authority for what is claimed to be the true particulars relative to the death of the noted Indian chief, Blackfish, who claimed Oldtown as his home. The evidence upon which Mr. Collier founded his statement is conceived to be such as to place the truth of it beyond dispute.

In June, 1788, a party of Shawnee Indians commanded by Blackfish made a marauding expedition to Kentucky, and at the headquarters of Paint Lick Creek, then in Madison County, they made an attack upon the house of a man named Stinson. It was Sunday morning and Stinson's boy, who lived away from home, had returned about sunrise.

When near the house he gave a shout to arouse the family that they could let him in, and as his sister opened the door for that purpose, the Indians rushed in after the boy and shot at Stinson and his wife, who were in bed, mortally wounding the latter and severely wounding Stinson in the thigh.

Stinson jumped from the bed and grappled with the leader of the party. At this instant the boy grasped his father's gun, which frightened the party, seven or eight in number, and they fled for the door, assisted in their exit by Polly, Stinson's daughter, who violently pushed the last ones on those ahead and sent them pell-mell out of the cabin, then barring the entrance.

Polly then turned and with a butcher knife, stabbed the Indian who was slowly killing her father. At the first blow the Indian raised his arm and knocked her across the room, but she came back again and fatally stabbed him. This Indian was Blackfish. In the fright of the moment, Jana, another daughter of Stinson, aged 14, jumped through the window and was captured by those outside. She remained a prisoner until 1797, where her liberation was effected at Detroit and she returned to her friends in Kentucky.

No matter what I myself may do.

Here they are ready and neat and trim

Always on hand for my slightest whim.

Books won't quarrel and books won't sneer.

Won't borrow money and disappear

Won't flatter to sell me some worthless thing

Set up a trap which they hope to spring.

Books won't vary with every mood

Or poison my life with ingratitude.

Here are my books, and they don't get drunk.

Don't come to my room to rob my trunk.

Don't disappoint me by going wrong

Or playing false when my faith was strong.

I can always trust them for comfort when I am sick and tired of the ways of men.

Books are constant. The while I live

Courage and wisdom and strength they give.

Laughter for glad times, faith for sad.

Many an hour with them all I've had.

And whether the world praise me or blame

The books that I've cherished remain the same.

OF New York

By Jack O'Donnell

Plot peddling has become a well established business in this balliwick of beauty and bombast.

The plot peddlers are men and women of super imagination who can tell good stories by the hour but could not write one if offered all the tea in China. They "think up" plots for novels, short stories, plays or vaudeville sketches and sell them to professional writers who have the ability to construct a story once they have the plot.

I know a plot peddler who makes the rounds of his writer friends every week. He tells me he gets most of his ideas from newspapers. "All I need is a germ," he says, "and in ten or fifteen minutes I've got a plot. For instance the papers carried a story about a mother and her daughter being found dead in their rooms, the mother bending over the daughter in a listening posture. I built a plot out of that which I sold to a well known writer of cheap fiction. He's going to make a serial out of it."

Another plot peddler I know sells ideas to the movies. He made $30,000 last year.

The Russian influence of which one hears so much in New York these days, is being felt back stage at Chaslin's Forty-sixth St. Theatre, where the Greenwich Village Follies are holding forth.

CARAMEL PIE

Caramel Pie seems to be a prime favorite, judging from the number of readers' letters I receive requesting a recipe for it. So today I am going to publish directions for making it.

Filling: Put into a frying pan one cup of light brown sugar, place pan over a moderately hot fire and stir now and then till contents are melted (perhaps ten minutes of cooking). Now slowly add one-half cup of boiling water; it will sizzle up and form lumps, but if you let it continue to cook for a few minutes the lumps will melt. Strain the mixture into a bowl and to it add one-half cup of granulated sugar mixed with three rounded teaspoons of cornstarch. Turn the mixture again through a sieve and put it in the top of a double boiler; add two cups of cold, sweet milk and let cook till thickened, stirring constantly. At the end of five minutes or thereabouts, add the beaten yolks of three eggs. To do this successfully it is best to mix a little of the hot pudding with the egg yolks, then turn the yolks into the cooking pudding. Let continue to cook several minutes longer, still stirring, before taking from fire and cooling.

Under Crust: Into a bowl; put one heaping cup of bread flour and work into it, with the finger tips, three rounded tablespoons of lard and butter mixed half in half. Then add enough cold water to form a stiff paste (about three tablespoons of water) and toss the mass out onto a floured board.

With a floured rolling pin roll into circular shape. When large enough to cover a pie pan, pick it up gently and place it over an ungreased pan (it is never necessary to grease a pie pan). Stick it all over with the prongs of a fork to permit escape of steam in baking (to avoid its being raised and there by the steam) and slip it into a very hot oven—500 degrees Fahrenheit—to bake about fifteen minutes.

Cool the crust before putting the cooled, cooked caramel filling into it. Spread the stiffly whipped, sweetened whites of three eggs over all and slip pie back into a low oven till browned—twelve minutes or longer, possibly. Serve very cold.

Tomorrow—Crocheted Bed Socks.

WIFE PRESERVERS

To remove the shells of boiled eggs quickly, place them in cold water for two or three seconds

Modish Mitzi MITZI ADMIRE ADELAIDE'S TRANSFORMATION Jay V. Jay

You might think Mitzi had her dress on with the front side back, but if you did you'd be wrong. The yoke and the bow are supposed to be in the back. They are as fashionable as the clusters of pleats on the skirt or the high hat with the crumpled brim. She is having tea with Polly who has a hat of brown velvet and gold and is surely correct in being chilly since her cocoa-dyed squirrel coat is so smart!

They were waiting for Adelaide—you can understand why Adelaide was unavoidably detained. It isn't every day that one acquires a new head of hair. Adelaide is the latest in transformations and she likes it so well that she may decide to grow her own, although as Mitzi says when you've already paid for a transformation what's the use of bothering with your own hair? You have to get your money's worth!

GAUTHIER OPPOSED TO ELIMINATION OF SCOUTING ELEVEN'S

DELAWARE, O., Nov. 10.—Instead of being a step toward better athletic relations, the elimination of scouting in intercollegiate sports would be a move in the opposite direction in the opinion of George Gauthier, director of athletics of Ohio Wesleyan University.

Contrary to popular conception, scouting is NOT stealing the other team's signals but instead it is strategy that is intended to strengthen the defensive play of the team which the scout is representing, Gauthier said.

"All the scout wants is the formation of the team. It is not difficult to anticipate plays once the formation of the team is known," the Wesleyan mentor asserted.

If scouting is abolished, alumni would attempt to scout on a smaller scale and send their "information" to their alma mater. It would not be long before a feeling of distrust among all schools would exist, Gauthier added.

At a recent meeting of the Buckeye Athletic Association of which Wesleyan is a member, it was proposed to send only one scout once during the season to watch a team on his school's schedule. Further discussion on this proposition may be made by the organization in an effort to prevent an overdoing of the present scouting system.

EAST HIGH TEAM TO PLAY BEAVERCREEK

East High and Beaver Creek Twp. High eleven will meet in an Armistice Day football attraction at Cox Memorial Athletic Field, Thursday afternoon, the game starting at 2:30 o'clock.

By a lucky break in the last three minutes of play in which an intercepted pass was turned into the single touchdown of the game, East High won from Beaver Creek in the season 7 to 0. Aside from this piece of luck, East was entirely outplayed but managed to stave off further scoring.

Later in the season East was defeated by the sturdy O. S. and S. O. Home team 14 to 12. Failure to kick goals after two touchdowns prevented the colored boys from having at least a tie score.

Thursday's contest will be the third of the season and in view of the earlier game, the return affair with Beaver should be a thriller.

BOWLING

Fords are again precariously perched in first position in the Xenia Bowling League by virtue of making a clean sweep of their three match games with the once formidable Candy Kits Tuesday night. Bill Horner, with a series of 573, led both teams for high three-game total. McCoy rolled the only 200 game of the evening. Box score:

Fords

EAGLES WILL GIVE HOME TALENT SHOW

John T. Sutton, co-author and producer of "The Lady in Blue" which was successfully given in Xenia last year, has written and will produce another stage piece, under auspices of Xenia Aerie, No. 1689, Fraternal Order of Eagles, in the near future.

Rehearsal for the production will start next week. Several of the same people appearing Nov. 16 and 17 in "The Bandbox Revue" will appear in Mr. Sutton's work.

Mr. Sutton finished writing the piece this week and is promising the Xenia public something different in the way of home-talent stage work.

XMAS COMMITTEES MEET AT HOME HERE

Thirty-five members of Christmas Committees of various war organizations of the state met at the O. S. and S. O. Home, Tuesday and arranged for the purchase of gifts for the pupils.

Organizations represented were: G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, W. R. C., Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, Legion Auxiliary and Daughters of Veterans.

Members of committees from the first three named organizations arranged for giving each state ward a book, with a year's subscription to two magazines for each cottage and the donation of several books to the Home Library.

Women of the W. R. C., Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, Legion Auxiliary and Daughters of Veterans plan to give each child a present, the entire roll being divided among the organizations.

Mrs. Whitehorn, Columbus, department president of the W. R. C., and several other state officers attended the meeting.

LIMITED HUNTING MAY CAUSE INFLUX OF NIMRODS HERE

Members of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association for $1 for a set of four. The culation that the state agricultural department may place a ban on hunting in several surrounding counties including Montgomery because of the epidemic of hog cholera and pneumonia.

The hunting season opens November 15 and if this order should go into effect in other counties, Greene County would experience a great influx of sportsmen, it is thought.

Accordingly the association is notifying local farmers, that because the hunting ban may become a reality, it will be best to erect posters on all farms where hunting is restricted with a printed request to gunners to ask permission of the owner before hunting on private lands.

These posters may be obtained from the fish and game organization for $11 for a set of four. The association is having a number printed upon canvas and payment for four also includes the association's dues for one year with no extra charge.

Hunters are asked to communicate with Frank Linkhart, president, or L. F. Cleveland, secretary for further information.

STRUCK BY TRUCK; PEDESTRIAN HURT

Ralph Owens, 39, Xenia Ave., is thought to have sustained possible internal injuries when he was knocked down on the Federal pike, by a truck loaded with straw on its way to the Hagar Straw Board and Paper Co. mill in Cedarville Tuesday night.

It is believed one wheel of the truck passed over his body but Dr. A. D. DeHaven, the attending physician is unable to ascertain the extent of his injuries until a further examination.

Owens was walking along a road when the accident occurred. Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville, rendered first aid and later Owens was brought to his home.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy
Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampoo hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair. Adv.

SPRING VALLEY

Both churches in Spring Valley will observe Sunday, November 14, as "Go to Church Day," is announced.

Sermons will be delivered by the Rev. J. F. Young, pastor of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. Harry L. Leasure, the evangelist, who is holding enthusiastic meetings at the Friends Church.

In this connection all members of both churches are being urged to attend the services.

I'M LONGING FOR YOU

Sometime I'll have to get again a pocket full of marbles.
Some tads and flints and agates and start out to playing keeps.
For the kids are all a talkin' now, they're playin' and they're squawkin' now;
It seems 'twas only yesterday that I was winning heaps.
Sometime I'll have to get again a dirty little cur dog.
My heart is often achin' just for one to romp and play.
For the world is full of bustle now; hustle and I tussle now.
I need to roam the hills again and hear my cur's loud bay.
Sometime I'll have to find again a fine bone-handled barlow,
A knife that's fine for cuttin' one's initials on a birch.
For I find I need some playin' now; at work too close I'm stayin' now.
I ought to cut a fishing pole and go to catching perch.
Sometime I'll have to get again a bunch of dried up corn silk,
And wrap them in some paper from an old stick candy poke.
For I hate this stuff I'm smokin' now; it often gets me chokin' now.
And it doesn't serve the purpose of the silks I used to smoke.
Sometime I'll have to get again a table full of biscuits,
Of steaming soda biscuits and all stuff that farmers eat;
For the bread that I devour now is making life look sour now,
I long for canned molasses and for pigs with pickled feet.
Sometime I'll have to find again a church on some old mud road,
A building old and heated with a heater burning chips.
For the churches are too fine now, they preach another line now
I don't enjoy my going like I did those old time trips.
A bus driver on the Jamestown Bus line says he can tell whether a man is going to Xenia for a hunting or a marriage license. He says it is easy to tell the hunted from the hunter.

FARM BUREAU HOLDS LEGISLATIVE MEET; XENIA MEN PRESENT

Greene County was represented by two delegates at the Farm Bureau legislative conference at Wilmington, Monday. They were Oscar E. Bradfute, former president of the Ohio and American Farm Bureau Federations, and William W. Anderson, Xenia.
The conference was the first of a series of ten being held over Ohio this week sponsored by the Farm Bureau to build an agriculture legislative program for use during the coming General Assembly and Congress. Approximately twenty-five legislative measures of state and national importance were discussed. Each delegate was asked to write out his opinions following the conference and to mail them to the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.
Principal speakers at the meeting were Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of the Farm Bureau and Grange at Columbus.
"The only relief from taxation in Ohio is in economy in government," said Dyer. "The taxpayer is the one who can bring this about. He has the opportunity of reviewing local budgets in local meetings."
"The trouble is we don't fight our own battles. That's why we are getting our noses rubbed in the mud and why we shall continue to get it rubbed unless we work personally and through such organizations as the Farm Bureau and the Grange."
Speaking of the state levy, Dyer said that there is no need for such a levy if the state will conduct its affairs economically. "If the state needs additional revenue, it can reach out for taxes on unnecessary, a thing which it has never yet done."
"Congress should maintain its original purpose in the development of Muscle Shoals," said Chester Gray. "This was to make munitions in time of war and low priced fertilizer in times of peace. It was not to make power as is done at present."

A plea for the merchant marine was voiced by Gray. "Any nation that is a creditor nation and a consuming nation must have its own ships in times of war."
Considerable discussion was given to farm relief through solution of the surplus problem. Delegates did not seem to have complete confidence in any bills which have been presented to Congress up to date.
Over seventy-five delegates were present from twelve southwestern counties. W. R. Lewis, president of the Clinton County Farm Bureau, presided, and L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, added in leading the discussion.

FORMER XENIAN IS DEAD IN FLORIDA

Brief word has been received by relatives of the death of Mrs. Mary Smith, 85, widow of Frank Smith, formerly of Xenia, which occurred in Miami, Fla., Tuesday.
Mrs. Smith has been in the South the past two or three years and before that time resided on E. Second St. She was well known here, her maiden name being Mary Linscott. Her husband was a contractor in Xenia a number of years.
She is survived by a brother, W. H. Linscott, Homestead, Fla., and one sister, Miss Minerva Linscott, Spring Valley, Mrs. Smith was a member of the First Reformed Church, Xenia.

night and will arrive in Xenia, Thursday morning at 10:40. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10:30 at First Reformed Church. Interment will be made in Beaver Cemetery.

HONEY LOU

by Beatrice Burton
author of "LOVE BOUND" and "HER MAN" ETC.

© JOHNSON FEATURES INC., 1926

REA: THIS FIRST: HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary to old "GRUMPY" WALLACK head of the Wallack Fabric Mills.

"Grumpy" hired Honey Lou, not only because she is quick and clever, but because she is pretty and pleasant to have around, so he says. Everyone at the place likes Honey Lou, from ANN LUDLOW, the office vamp, to JOE MEAD, CWS, the shipping clerk. But Honey Lou is half afraid of Joe Meadows, without exactly knowing why.

Young JACK WALLACK comes to work in his father's mills to learn the business "from the ground up." He falls in love with Honey Lou and she with him. But when he drives her home in his car and tries to kiss her, one night, she slaps his face and leaves him. Later he apologizes and they become good friends.

When he meets Honey Lou's gentle well-bred mother and her half-sister, MARGRET MOODY, he realizes that she has been as carefully reared as any of the girls in his own world outside the mills. One night Honey Lou meets one of his friends, ANGELA ALLEN, who lives next door to the Wallack family.

She feels sure that Angela is in love with Jack and is surprised when she has an invitation from her to a birthday dinner party in his honor.

Mrs. Huntley makes Honey Lou an elaborate party dress, all lace and rose-colored crepe, and a tiara worth to wear in her hair. But when Honey Lou arrives at the house and finds only six plainly-dressed guests instead of the big party she expected, she realizes how overdone she is and wishes the earth would swallow her up.

Angela persuades her to take two cocktails, telling her that they are not much more than fruit juice. Honey Lou drinks them and, overcome by the liquor and the heat and the excitement, faints dead away. And so she does not hear the saintly Angela tell Jack Wallack that she took several drinks, calling her "hard-boiled."

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER VIII

THE next thing Jack knew Honey Lou was stretched out on a large and downy bed that felt like a cloud beneath her aching body. She slowly raised her eyelids. They felt as heavy as lead and it took all of her strength to get them open.

A fog seemed to hang before her eyes. Through it she could see the green walls and curtains of Angela's bedroom.

But how had she come there? What on earth had happened to her? Then she remembered taking the cocktail that Angela had given her in the sunroom. After that everything seemed to be a blank.

"I shouldn't have drunk it," she thought. "I didn't want it. She slipped back into her half-sleep."

Voices roused her. They came floating in to her from the hall outside the room. She lay—Mrs. Clemens' high shrill voice and the gentle tones of Angela.

"How do you happen to know this Huntley girl?" Suzanne Clemens was asking. "I don't know her from Adam," Angela answered. "I asked her here tonight because Jack wanted me to. She works in his father's office, you know."

There was silence for a minute or two. Then Suzanne Clemens spoke again.

"Well, Jack is sure off his onion about her," she said. "He spent fifteen perfectly good minutes to-night telling me how wonderful she is, and how she wouldn't think of petting or drinking or playing cards. So I sure had to laugh when I saw her take her cigarette and her gin like an old hand. I wonder what he thinks of her now?"

Honey Lou sat up on the bed. The room swam around her. "I'm not an old hand at such things," she thought dizzily. "I'm going right out and tell them so. They've got to know that those drinks I had tonight were the first ones I ever had in my life. I can't let Jack think I'm a rowdy."

She put her head out on the floor and staggered across the room. She floundered out into the hall. She was very sick and dizzy. "Terribly sick!" she heard her own voice moan above the ringing in her ears.

Then everything went black before her eyes and she felt herself falling—falling. Darkness closed over her, like night.

A NATION'S LOVE STORY

In a mighty crisis Edward Everett Hale took a colossal theme and with it wrote the nation's greatest love story. Lieutenant Nolan, his hero, cursed he land that gave him birth and received the terrible sentence of banishment for life.

For 56 years—from youth to white-haired age—the loneliest man in the world sailed the seas to Ports of God-knows-where, but no merciful helmsman ever steered Nolan's ship into the Port of Home.

Mother and sweetheart gave their lives to gain his release, but he still remained

"THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY"

William Fox, with such a theme, has achieved his most genuine and sincere motion picture production. It is

"AS NO MAN HAS LOVED"

Besides being an epic of a mother's devotion, a sweetheart's loyalty and an overwhelming love of country, it tells an epic of an Empire. Furious drama and action in the battles at sea, the capture of a slave-ship, are without parallel in any other motion picture ever produced.

the black-and-nickel roadster purred its way across the town, saving the lights of the Allen use far behind it.

Jack Wallack was driving very slowly. His left hand gripped the steering wheel, but she knew of the girl whose fragrant head lay on his shoulder. The night wind lifted her hair and blew a strand of it across his cheek.

He glanced down at her—at this girl who had made him believe she was better than other girls. In the darkness he could just make out the white glimmer of her face, with its closed eyes and its lips parted with her slow, soft breathing.

"Sleeping it off," he said to himself, with some bitterness. But Honey Lou was not asleep. She felt drugged and heavy and dizzy, but she knew where she was.

She had no recollection of leaving the Allen house.

She could not remember getting into Jack's car, but she knew of the fact that she was in it, alone with him now. And he was—what was it that little Suzanne Clemens had said?—"off his onion" about her!

She opened her heavy eyes and saw his face close to hers, outlined against the star-powdered midnight sky. She put up one of her hands and pulled his head down to hers. She never would have done it if she had been herself, and Jack Wallack knew it.

Her voice was thick and sleepy. "Kiss me, boy!" said Honey Lou. She never would have said it if she had been herself. And Jack Wallack knew that, too.

The darkness hid the look of bitterness that was written on his face.

Disgusted with her, but half in love with her still, he bent his blond head over Honey Lou's dark one. As if he could not help himself, he pulled her closer to him and his mouth closed down hard over her rose-soft mouth.

He kissed her, despoiling himself for it while he was doing it.

"I ought to tell him how I happened to take that second cocktail," Honey Lou thought drowsily—"how I would have offended Miss Allen if I hadn't taken it."

But she didn't tell him. She was too tired to talk—too tired to do anything but stay there in his encircling arm.

Tomorrow would do. She could explain everything to him then.

It was a long time before Honey Lou had another chance to tell him about Angela and the cocktail.

The night before seemed like a wild dream to Honey Lou when she woke up the next morning. She could remember parts of the night's happenings and there were parts that were a blank to her.

For instance, she had no recollection of coming up the stairs to this flat. But she could remember that Margaret helped her take off her clothes and get into bed. She could remember that the bed had seemed to rock like a canoe in midocean.

She raised herself on her elbow and looked around the room, pearl gray in the morning light. Over the foot of her bed the rose-pink party dress hung like a limp ghost.

One the other side of the room Margaret's bed was tumbled and empty.

"I suppose she's gone down to the hospital already," she said to herself. "I wonder what time it is."

While she was wondering the door opened and Margaret came in. She had on her new winter coat and the hat she wore when she went to church or to a show with Steve Mayhew.

"Where are you going, all wrapped up like a broken arm?" Honey Lou asked, and then it came to her that this was Sunday.

"To church," Margaret answered, and sat down on the side of the bed.

"Honey Lou," she said solemnly, "you came home—drunk last night."

That was like Margaret. Not to beat about the bush, but to come straight to the point.

Honey Lou stared at her. "Does Mother know?" she asked, her voice only a thin whisper.

Margaret shook her head. "She'd gone to bed," she answered. "So had I. But I woke up when I heard Jack Wallack bringing you up the stairs, and I let you in."

"What did he say? What did Jack say?" the younger girl asked anxiously.

But before Margaret had time to answer the door of the little white room opened once more and Mrs. Huntley came in.

"Well," she said, smiling at Honey Lou, "you must have had a wonderful time last night to sleep so late this morning."

"I did," Honey Lou replied. There was a little catch in her voice. "I had a perfectly beautiful time."

Mrs. Huntley's eyes shifted their clear gaze to the rose-colored dress on the foot of the bed.

"And wasn't your dress all right?" she asked brightly. She picked it up, shook it out and hung it in the closet.

"It was just perfect," Honey Lou told her, without batting an eye. Not for worlds would she have told her anything else.

"I knew it would be," her mother said. "I know what people wear to a dinner party. Well, tell me all about it. How many were there? What did you do, dance?"

The girl shook her brown head. "Played cards and talked," she said shortly. "We had a good time."

She turned her face to the wall with its rose-patterned paper. There was stillness in the room for a moment, broken only by the rustling of the paper as Mrs. Huntley packed the wreath of chignon roses away in a drawer of the dresser.

"Mother," Honey Lou said suddenly. She was sitting up in bed now. Her small heart-shaped face was very white above her pink muslin nightgown. "Mother, I got—tipsy last night."

She saw her mother's shoulders jerk as she turned away from the old dresser.

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I said. Don't look at me like that. It wasn't my fault," Honey Lou faltered. "There were cocktails to drink—and I had two. I thought they were fruit punch at first. Then, after I found out that they were cocktails, I had another. I just couldn't get out of taking it. Angela Allen almost forced it on me."

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Huntley cut in. Her voice was harsh with strain. "No one can force anything on you that you don't want. How many did she take?"

Honey Lou had no idea how many of the little orange-colored drinks Angela had taken. She could not remember seeing her take even one of them. The more she thought it over the more certain she was that Angela had not drunk at all. That was queer, wasn't it?

"I'll have to ask Jack about it," she said to herself.

But on the next day she had no chance to ask him about it. She did not even see him.

On the next day—which was Tuesday—she caught a flying glimpse of him as he drove his car out of the courtyard at five in the afternoon.

"Why doesn't he come up to see me?" she wondered. "What can be the matter with him?"

Ann Ludlow asked her that very question toward the end of the week.

"What's the matter with your friend Jack Wallack?" she inquired on Friday noon when she and Honey Lou were having their daily gossip-fest, as they called it. "He's giving you the run around, isn't he?"

Honey Lou shrugged her shoulders and managed one of her smiles. "I reckon he's thrown me down, Ann," she said, as lightly as she could.

"You should worry," Ann comforted her. "There's plenty more mothers got sons, you know."

Honey Lou thought it all over that night, as she started home through the winter twilight.

Usually she loved that journey home at night. She was a town girl and the sights and sounds of town thrilled her the way the sight of mountains will thrill the hill-born—the way the sight and sound of the sea will content those who have spent their lives on ships.

But that night her ears were deaf to the great music of the traffic, and her eyes were blinded to the golden shop windows, with their glittering Christmas wares and their green Christmas wreaths. She went along, deep in her own thoughts.

What could she have done to make Jack Wallack behave toward her as if she were an utter stranger to him? Was it because she had drunk those two drinks and "passed out"? Or was it because she had let him kiss her in his car on the way home?

What was the old saying that her mother was always quoting—the old saying about men who "kiss and ride away?"

Honey Lou gave her shoulders a shrug.

"Well, I reckon that's just what they do," said Honey Lou to herself, and she made up her troubled mind that she would not care. She would not care.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

saw the building literally lifted from its foundation, bumped over the ground in a series of grinding roars and then dumped into the grove of trees. Johnny legged it all the faster. He staggered into the home of the Rev. W. S. Heigham, nearby, and blurted: "The school house has been blown away. Telephone everybody."

The grinding crash of broken timbers had already acted as a warning to the village. It could be heard above the roar of the wind and the thrashing of trees. In a few minutes the whole village of some 800 people was on its way to the hill where the school house had stood.

Children, some hurt, some merely terror-stricken, were already beginning to emerge from the wreckage as the first of the rescuers reached the hill.

Two physicians—Dr. George D. Heath and Dr. Thomas F. Owen—were among the first to arrive. They dispatched word to Washington for ambulances and doctors. They had seen enough in a few minutes to know that there was work aplenty. Two ministers, the Rev. Father Ward and Rev. Greenwald, were also soon on the scene. The Catholic priest gave several of the children the last rites, of the church there amid the wreckage.

Two country hotels and the village newspaper office were turned into temporary hospitals. As fast as he children could be explicated, they were carried to the village proper and later the injured were placed in fast automobiles and hurried to Washington hospitals, thirty-five miles away.

One little fellow—Samuel Berry, a bulance that carried him went—is alive today because the ambulance fast enough to the hospital. The boy had one arm literally torn from his body, besides suffering a fractured skull. Physicians said today he had a chance for recovery.

The stories of the survivors are virtually all the same.

Miss Ethel Grapes, the 22-year-old school teacher, in charge of thirty-five primary pupils, who was badly injured, although not seriously, said:

"It had been raining most of the day and, a little before three o'clock, the wind seemed getting stronger. I heard a rumbling noise and looked out of the win-

cow. Things looked black and ugly. I was beginning to feel nervous when, all of a sudden, the window panes just blew out. The children started toward me, when suddenly we all seemed to be flying through the air. Everything was whirling around and around. I guess I lost consciousness, for the next thing I knew, I was lying on the ground and there was a child lying across me."

Concrete streets always remain true, even and rigid

Duluth Lays 967,214 Square Yards of Concrete Pavements

Several years ago Duluth, Minnesota, began to pave streets with concrete. It has continued to do so every year since.

Last year, street paving awards were one hundred per cent concrete. When present contracts are completed, the city will have 967,214 square yards of this permanent pavement.

Property owners say that concrete is ideal for fine residential streets, as well as in the business districts, where heavy grinding traffic soon wears out other pavements.

They have found that concrete requires practically no maintenance, that it is safe to drive on, wet or dry, and that the extreme range of temperature common in Duluth has no effect on its durability.

Concrete also has a pleasing, light gray color, which makes it the aristocrat of pavements.

These are some of the reasons why more than 1,000 cities and towns laid concrete streets in 1925.

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy.
